Further Expand Your First Website John Rhea, Joseph Highway Rhobberes's appetite for profit is never sated. He'd like you to expand the store area, add drop-down menus, and add an image gallery. This is the third book in a series, but don't worry if you haven't completed the other books; we'll provide you with the starter files so you can still code right along. In this book, we'll start with a little site maintenance to make your building job easier and your site more robust. We'll then expand the store side of the site, adding a page for each item, giving you more zombie-smashing weapon slots, so to speak, and shoe-horning in a product displaying sidebar to the major pages. Once that's done, Highway would like us to add some interactive HTML and CSS. We'll first add a form to the donation page and explore some of the form HTML elements and attributes we didn't get to in Expand Your First Website, like select, option, multiple, min, max, and step. Next, we'll create a set of drop-down menus using CSS pseudo-classes and the direct descendant selector combinator. Then we'll add a full interactive photo gallery where you can change what large image is shown by clicking on a thumbnail. We'll discuss the checked pseudo-class and both sibling selector combinators. What are you waiting for? Let's get to the further expanding of that first website of yours and thwacking the snot out of those zombies. Be a Good Friend Ben Hubbard, 2021
