

Handwritten text in two columns, likely a letter or document. The script is cursive and appears to be from the 16th or 17th century. The paper is aged and stained, with some ink bleed-through visible from the reverse side. The text is written in a dark ink, possibly iron gall, and is arranged in two distinct columns. The first column is on the left and the second is on the right. The handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the period.
