landscape change in the Canadian Rockies national park biologist Cliff White and Canadian Rockies historian Ted Hart Working with historical photographs White has retraced the steps of the original photographers and taken new shots in the same locales a technique known as repeat photography Comparing these images side by side the authors show the dramatic changes to the Rockies landscape that have occurred over the years The sets of photographs generally follow ecological regions moving west from Calgary and the foothills ascending through the low elevation montane zone of Banff National Park upwards into the lower and upper subalpine The authors then follow the historic photographers routes for brief forays onto the west slopes of the Rockies in the Columbia River watershed of British Columbia and east into the Front Ranges along the Red Deer and North Saskatchewan rivers Moving north the photographs depict the high windswept alpine zone and glacial ice of the Columbia Icefield before passing through Jasper National Park and turning eastward to descend to the parkland region at Edmonton Alberta Useful captions describe the landscape changes visible in each then and now view and five essays more fully explore the historical political and ecological processes at work Illustrated throughout with striking images this book is at once a showcase for the beauty of the Rocky Mountain landscape and a valuable source of information about ecological change in this world famous region Manufacturing National Park Nature J. Keri Cronin, 2011-07-01 National parks occupy a prominent place in the Canadian imagination yet we are only beginning to understand how their visual representation has shaped and continues to inform our perceptions of ecological issues and the natural world J Keri Cronin draws on historical and modern postcards advertisements and other images of Jasper National Park to trace how various groups and the tourism industry have used photography to divorce the park from real environmental threats and instead package it as a series of breathtaking vistas and adorable looking animals Manufacturing National Park Nature demonstrates that popular forms of picturing nature can have ecological implications that extend far beyond the frame of the image
