Practicing Restorative Justice Erika Strauss Chavarria, 2024-09-30. Traditionally, educator preparation programs only provide classes related to content, practical pedagogy, and classroom management. If we hope to see any level of justice in the education system, preparation programs must include courses that take an honest and deep dive into the ways in which racism shows up in schools and communities. Aspiring educators are craving and demanding the tools and resources to be the best educators they can be for our students in this country. They know the importance of advocating for and enacting anti-racism in their pedagogical practices, in school policy and culture, and in their community. The authors of this book will offer first-hand testimony of how deep racism permeates public education, an institution that since its founding was never meant for Black and brown students, as well as solutions to create truly just and equitable school communities. The ultimate mission of Practicing Restorative Justice is to show readers the effectiveness of restorative justice practices in addressing a number of issues that impact Black and brown students. It takes a deep dive into the School to Prison Pipeline, in which failed education policies push students of color out of schools and into the penal system, dooming them for life. Other topics include policing in schools, systemic racism's impact on classrooms and learners at all grade levels, and ways in which to decolonize the education system. The book provides classroom instructors, college of education faculty, and preservice teachers the concrete means to improve the learning experience of students of color in our public education system.

Meditations and Ascensions Brenda M. Greene, Fred Beauford, 2008. This collection provides in-depth meditations and analyses of literature by Black writers. Reflections on the Black experience, the American experience, and a more global experience and worldview are all widely discussed, as well as future trends and ascensions for Black literature.

School Library Journal, 2004

How to Sell Your Family to the Aliens Paul Noth, 2018-04-03. This is an out-of-this-world, funny first book in a madcap illustrated adventure series from New Yorker cartoonist Paul Noth. Happy Conklin Jr. is the only 10-year-old who has to shave three times a day. Hap's dad is a brilliant inventor of screwball products, and being a Conklin kid means sometimes being experimented on. So Hap has his beard, and his five sisters each have their own unique and often problematic qualities too. And although Hap's dad has made a fortune with his wacky inventions sold via nonstop TV infomercials all of that money has gone to Hap's tyrannical Grandma. While she lives in an enormous mansion the rest of the family lives in two rooms in the basement. All Hap has ever wanted is to have a normal life so when he sees a chance to get rid of Grandma he takes it. He only means to swap out Grandma but when he oops sells his whole family to the aliens he wants nothing more than to get them back. He just has to figure out how.

The Greenwood Encyclopedia of African American Literature: U-Z Hans A. Ostrom, J. David Macey, 2005. Designed to meet the needs of high school students, undergraduates and general readers, this encyclopedia is the most comprehensive reference available on African American literature from its origins to the present. Other works include many brief entries or offer extended biographical sketches of a limited selection of writers. This encyclopedia surpasses existing references by offering full and current coverage of a vast range of authors and topics. While most of the entries are on individual authors, the encyclopedia gathers together information about the genres and geographical and cultural environments in which these writers have worked and the social, political and aesthetic movements in which they have participated. Thus the encyclopedia gives special attention to the historical and cultural forces that have shaped African American writing. Publisher: Orange Coast Magazine

Waterbaby Michael Muhammad Knight, 2011-05. As children Tam and her older brother were training to be Olympic swimming champions. Pitted in a practice race against each other, Tam was out in front, proving that she had the superior skills until she suddenly suffered her first epileptic seizure. Just as he passed her to win, Tam's brother pulled her from the water, saving her life. He was dubbed a hero and his adult life continued with heroic exploits in canine search and rescue at earthquakes and terrorist bombings, but Tam, who steadfastly refused to enter the water again, never forgave her brother for finishing the race while she'd felt she had no choice but to wear the mantle of disabled. Thus started 30 years of careful vigilance to never again allow her body to betray her nor her brother to ever again exert influence on her path. But eventually Tam finds that her life of cautious control and the arm's length estrangement that she's mentally maintained with her family has taken its toll She's retired early feels useless and in limbo and makes an abrupt decision to visit Maine and assist in her sister's genealogy research by exploring a legend that suggests an ancestor was the sole survivor of a shipwreck a baby girl rescued by a lighthouse keeping great great grandfather In Maine Tam meets a distantly removed cousin Nat who tells her of another local legend an unidentified woman who is said to have returned to the lighthouse in the 1930's to drown herself and whose ghost is sometimes seen at twilight walking the rocky shore Together they fabricate a fantasy version of their ancestors experience in the remote lighthouse where it's possible a shipwrecked baby did wash to shore and irrevocably changed generations of lives a fantasy that also has a sexual component for the two of them Still retaining an adolescent vision of herself as a partial invalid Tam has had a habit of living and reliving the minor traumas of her past but Nat gives her the chance to be someone different yet still the same Tam is for all intents and purposes a ghost but Nat's version of her ghostliness ascribes to it the kind of heroic mystery and romance that Tam has always assumed her brother to have but which Nat now gives her for herself Meanwhile in the real world to add to the drama Tam has rescued a baby who has been taken from his teenage mother by sneaking it out from the small seaside hospital and hiding both mother and child with herself at the privately owned lighthouse where her ancestors once lived Tam's romantic quest to experience her ancestors tragedies and heartbreak takes the particular form of a fascination with Mary Catherine an ancestor who died at the age of 33 and onto whom Tam projects all her own anxieties but this alternate life is invaded by the reappearance of her brother And Tam in a commanding re entry into the water chooses to close the book on her life of self imposed susceptibility
