Laboratory Payment Policy Institute of Medicine, Division of Health Care Services, Committee on Medicare Payment Methodology for Clinical Laboratory Services, 2001-01-04 Clinical laboratory tests play an integral role in helping physicians diagnose and treat patients. New developments in laboratory technology offer the prospect of improvements in diagnosis and care but will place an increased burden on the payment system. Medicare, the federal program providing coverage of health care services for the elderly and disabled, is the largest payer of clinical laboratory services. Originally designed in the early 1980s, Medicare's payment policy methodology for outpatient laboratory services has not evolved to take into account technology, market, and regulatory changes and is now outdated. This report examines the current Medicare payment methodology for outpatient clinical laboratory services in the context of environmental and technological trends, evaluates payment policy alternatives, and makes recommendations to improve the system. The Corporate Practice of Medicine James C. Robinson, 1999-11-01 One of the country's leading health economists presents a provocative analysis of the transformation of American medicine from a system of professional dominance to an industry under corporate control James Robinson examines the economic and political forces that have eroded the traditional medical system of solo practice and fee for service insurance hindered governmental regulation and invited the market competition and organizational innovations that now are under way The trend toward health care corporatization is irreversible he says and it parallels analogous trends toward privatization in the world economy The physician is the key figure in health care and how physicians are organized is central to the health care system says Robinson He focuses on four forms of physician organization to illustrate how external pressures have led to health care innovations multispecialty medical groups Independent Practice Associations IPAs physician practice management firms and physician hospital organizations These physician organizations have evolved in the past two decades by adopting from the larger corporate sector similar forms of ownership governance finance compensation and marketing In applying economic principles to the maelstrom of health care Robinson highlights the similarities between competition and consolidation in medicine and in other sectors of the economy He points to hidden costs in fee for service medicine overtreatment rampant inflation uncritical professional dominance regarding treatment decisions factors often overlooked when newer organizational models are criticized Not everyone will share Robinson's appreciation for market competition and corporate organization in American health care but he challenges those who would return to the inefficient and inequitable era of medicine from which we've just emerged Forcefully written and thoroughly documented The Corporate Practice of Medicine presents a thoughtful and optimistic view of a future health care system one in which physician entrepreneurship is a dynamic component
