in Germany and abroad Twenty years later even greater scholarly and public interest in the master's contributions to painting the decorative arts architecture and town planning propels his extraordinary legacy into the new millennium The more closely we examine Schinkel's works the more fully we understand the importance of this cultural heritage There is perhaps no single architect who fragments Absolutist constructs with a greater sense of poetry transparency and moral dignity than Schinkel Although the materials of building the time and context may change it is unlikely that any new pretence to avant gardism be it the belief in pure technology or its dialectical relationship with Deconstructivism can convincingly replace the classical tradition that has continued to critically define and refine itself for at least the past 2500 years Schinkel's best work is superbly representative of this on going Western tradition The essays presented here are written by leading Schinkel scholars and address a variety of topics including Schinkel's influence on 20th century architecture and urban planning The contributors are Martina Abri Stanford Anderson Frank Augustin Ernst Badstubner Barry Bergdoll Rand Carter Emanuele Fidone Erik Forssman Ralf F Hartmann Andreas Kahlow Hans Joachim Kunst Jean Francois Lejeune Goerd Peschken Klaus Jan Philipp Heinz Schonemann and Michael Seiler
