Construction in the Landscape T.G. Carpenter, 2012-06-25 Construction in the Landscape describes the impact of construction on the land and landscape where it takes place Geographical coverage is necessarily global to reflect the great variation both in people's economic and social needs and in the shortage or abundance of natural resources Part I introduces both land resources whether used for agriculture human settlement or mineral extraction or conserved as scenery wildlife habitat or for the undefined needs of future generations and construction its products skills processes and impacts on land resources Part II describes specific forms of civil engineering from landform adaptation through dams and river control works coastal construction and transport infrastructure to particular types of structure such as bridges towers and power stations or the layout of complete settlements Part III deals with regional planning of construction and land use in different geographical circumstances from fine scenery through rural countryside to city and suburban development and to the sort of land arrangements that may be sustainable for an increased but hopefully more civilized human population a century hence

Landscape experiences as a cultural ecosystem service in a Nordic context Lindhjem, Henrik, Reinvang, Rasmus, Zandersen, Marianne, 2015-08-19 Cultural ecosystem services in the form of experiences derived from landscapes are potentially important but often overlooked Given the large and unprecedented landscape changes many of the Nordic countries are undergoing there is a need to find ways of including people's preferences and the value of landscape impacts in policy assessments and decision making processes The project aim has been to synthesize knowledge about the magnitude and value of landscape experiences and investigate current practices and examples of how landscape impacts are incorporated or not in policy assessments and decision making contexts in the Nordics The literature demonstrates potentially high unaccounted welfare loss from landscape change We find clear weaknesses in current practices that a second phase will try to address The project was carried out by Vista Analysis in Oslo and Department of Environmental Science at Aarhus University from 2014-15

Learning Landscape Ecology Sarah E. Gergel, Monica G. Turner, 2017-03-30 This title meets a great demand for training in spatial analysis tools accessible to a wide audience Landscape ecology continues to grow as an exciting discipline with much to offer for solving pressing and emerging problems in environmental science Much of the strength of landscape ecology lies in its ability to address challenges over large areas over spatial and temporal scales at which decision making often occurs As the world tackles issues related to sustainability and global change the need for this broad perspective has only increased Furthermore spatial data and spatial analysis core methods in landscape ecology are critical for analyzing land cover changes world wide While spatial dynamics have long been fundamental to terrestrial conservation strategies land management and reserve design mapping and spatial themes are increasingly recognized as important for ecosystem management in aquatic coastal and marine systems This second edition is purposefully more applied and international in its examples approaches perspectives and contributors It includes new advances in quantifying landscape structure and connectivity such as graph theory as well as labs that incorporate the latest scientific understanding of ecosystem services resilience social ecological landscapes and even seascapes Of course as before the exercises emphasize easy to use widely available software <http://sarahgergel.net/learning>

Pictorial Effect in Photography Henry Peach Robinson, 1897

Introduction to Ansel Adams Gilad James, PhD, Ansel Adams was an American photographer born in San Francisco, California on February 20, 1902. He is considered one of the most important and influential photographers of the 20th century. Adams developed a passion for photography at a young age and began taking pictures with a Box Brownie camera. His first published photograph appeared in the Sierra Club Bulletin in 1922. Adams is best known for his work in landscape photography, particularly his images of the American West. His black and white photographs captured the rugged beauty of the landscapes and helped to influence how people viewed and appreciated the natural world. Adams was also a writer and a conservationist, and he dedicated much of his life to protecting the environment and promoting conservation efforts. Adams was a pioneer in the use of the zone system, a photographic technique that he developed to ensure consistent exposure and tonality in his photographs. He was also an advocate for the use of large format cameras that produced high quality images with sharp detail and tonal range. Adams' photography was characterized by his use of bold contrasts, deep shadows and rich textures. His images often featured dramatic skies, natural patterns or the interplay of light and shadow. His photographs helped to redefine landscape photography as a fine art, and his impact on the field continues to be felt today. Adams died in Monterey, California on April 22, 1984, but his legacy lives on through his photographs and his contributions to the world of photography and conservation.
