Photosensitive epilepsy by P M Jeavons, G F A Harding; Spastics International Medical Publications, London, 1975, 121 pages, £4.50

In this duograph the authors describe a syndrome in which epileptic seizures can be triggered by visual stimuli. The book begins with a review of earlier reports of such cases, and then goes on to describe the authors' own study of 460 photosensitive patients. Although rarely diagnosed at present, photosensitive epilepsy may occur in more than 1 in 10000 of the population. It is commoner than true petit mal, and is found most frequently among adolescents.

Readers of Perception will be most interested in the types of stimulus which can precipitate fits in photosensitive patients. Reports that seizures sometimes occur while patients are watching television has led to the study of flicker and pattern as relevant stimulus parameters. Jeavons and Harding systematically plotted the range of stroboscopic flash rates which would induce seizures in their patients; in some cases this range was very narrow. A fine grid pattern placed on the face of the stroboscope facilitated the induction of seizures. The effects of the stimulator were markedly reduced if one eye was closed, or if the image did not fall on the fovea. The authors found that the colour of the stimulus made very little difference. From the abnormal shapes of the visual evoked potentials recorded from the scalp, and the presence in some patients of spiking in the occipital EEG, Jeavons and Harding suggest that a failure of inhibition in the visual cortex may be the cause of the epileptic discharges.

The authors are to be congratulated for their attempt to approach the problem of photosensitive epilepsy so comprehensively. Their emphasis on the standardization of testing procedures (especially the quantification of the stimuli provided by different makes of stroboscope) is particularly welcome. On the other hand, the reading is made difficult in places by the variety of styles of writing used throughout the book, the lack of a summary at the end of most of the chapters, and the division of the (admittedly heterogeneous) sample of patients into so many groups and subgroups. Nevertheless, the book is a useful source of information, not only for practising clinicians, but also for researchers into epilepsy who seek a precise model to use in studying the mechanisms of seizure initiation, and for the many researchers in vision who are interested in the practical applications of their work.

Movements of the eyes by R H S Carpenter; Pion, London (distributed by Academic Press, London and New York), 1977, 420 pages, £13.50 (US: $27.00)

There is an ancient proverb which says that people will bow down even to the servants of a king. The eye reigns as supreme monarch among the human sense organs, and the oculomotor system has achieved some prestige by its subservience to this master. Much of this prestige is indeed justified because the exquisite precision of localization and resolution in the sensory mechanism of the eye demands a matching precision from the system that is responsible for placing and holding it in position. But, in addition, the system controlling eye movements demands study in its own right as an exemplar of biological control systems.

Historically, World War II indirectly generated an upsurge of interest in the physiology of eye movements. The exigencies of military technology brought about the development of the theoretical analysis of automatic control systems, and new methods were evolved for handling "information" as a measurable quantity, subject to its own natural laws. The design of automatic control systems demanded of engineers the solution of the very same problems that the evolutionary process had been solving, by trial and error, in the development of biological control systems; to point a finger, to aim a gun automatically, to lock a radar beam onto a moving plane, and to direct the eyes at a moving bird, are closely analogous processes. Two features of these processes were understood only imperfectly by 19th century physicists. The one concerned the consequences

Language And Speech Handbook Of Perception Volume Vii:

Handbook Of Clinical And Experimental Neuropsychology Gianfranco Denes, Luigi Pizzamiglio, 2020-03-06 The domain of neuroscience has had one of the most explosive growths in recent decades within this development there has been a remarkable and renewed interest in the study of the relations between behaviour and the central nervous system Part of this new attention is connected with the contribution of new technologies PET fMRI permitting more precise mapping of neural structures responsible for cognitive functions and the development of new theoretical models of mental activities The diffusion of new pathologies for example the pattern of cognitive impairment associated with AIDS has further enlarged the field of clinical neuropsychology Finally there has been an expanding clinical interest in the understanding and management of age related cognitive changes This volume is the translated and updated version of the second edition of Manuale di Neuropsicologia Zanichelli 1996 by the same authors and it reflects the current status of the art It is intended to blend clinical and theoretical aspects of neuropsychology The first part discusses the instrumental and clinical methods of investigation in neuropsychology together with their development A long section is dedicated to the language and memory disorders The impairment of non verbal cognitive functions such as the disorders of space orientation of visuo perceptual abilities and of the emotions and attention are extensively discussed The pattern of degenerative dementias is thoroughly described as is thoroughly described as well as a number of new topics such as a neuropsychological approach to consciousness Finally perspectives for treatment of some cognitive disorders are outlined Linguistics in the Netherlands 1977-1979 Wim Zonneveld, Fred Weerman, 2019-11-18 No detailed description available for Linguistics in the Netherlands 1977-1979 EBOOK: Cognitive Psychology 2e Kenneth Gilhooly, Fiona Lyddy, Frank Pollick, Sandra Buratti, 2020-12-22 EBOOK Cognitive Psychology 2e The Right Hemisphere Alfredo Ardila, Peggy Ostrosky-Solis, 1984 The Neurolinguistics of Bilingualism Franco Fabbro, 2013-05-24 This book introduces the reader to both neurolinguistics per se and the neuropsychological aspects of bilingualism Neurolinguistics may roughly be defined as a subset of neuropsychology namely the study of the representation and processing of language in the brain To this effect the first chapters of the book focus on the basic neuropsychology of language processing and acquisition The second half of the book addresses the issues of cerebral representation and processing of language in bi or multilingual subjects All aspects are systematically dealt with namely the definition of bilingualism an analysis of all the issues related to bilingual aphasia i e patterns of recovery of the patients various languages in diverse population an investigation of the methodologies used in the study of the neuropsychological aspects of the various linguistic functions such as comprehension production and translation and lastly the issues of cerebral lateralization and neuroanatomical localization of the numerous cortical and subcortical structures subserving the various language system components in multilingual subjects It is an excellent introduction to both the neuropsychology of language and the phenomena related to bilingualism This book will be of particular interest to students of language therapy aphasiology applied psycholinguistics neurolinguistics and in general to students of medicine who wish to become more knowledgeable about the specific needs of patients in a multilingual society Talking the Talk Trevor A. Harley, 2017-02-02 Talking the Talk provides a comprehensive introduction to the psychology of language written for the reader with no background in the field or any prior knowledge of psychology Written in an accessible and friendly style the book answers the questions people actually have about language how do we speak listen read and learn language The book advocates an experimental approach explaining how psychologists can use experiments to build models of language processing Considering the full breadth of psycholinguistics the book covers core topics including how children acquire language how language is related to the brain and what can go wrong with it Fully updated throughout this edition also includes Additional coverage on the genetics of language Insight into potential cognitive advantages of bilingualism New content on brain imaging and neuroscience Increased emphasis on recursion and what is special about language Talking the Talk is written in an engaging style which does not hesitate to explain complex concepts It is essential reading for all undergraduate students and those new to the topic as well as the interested lay reader Developmental Psychobiology and Developmental Neurobiology Elliott M. Blass, 2013-03-07 Psychology Library Editions: Psychology of Reading Various Authors, 2021-03-01 The psychology of reading investigates the process by which readers extract visual information from written text and make sense of it Psychology Library Editions Psychology of Reading 11 Volumes brings together as one set or individual volumes a small series of previously out of print titles originally published between 1980 and 1995 The set includes topics such as dyslexia and the relationship between speech and reading Principles of Phonetics John Laver, 1994-05-12 Comprehensive textbook on phonetics with examples from over 500 languages Cognition and Motor Processes W. Prinz, A. F. Sanders, 2012-12-06 The issue of the relationship between cognition and motor processes can be and has been raised at different levels of analysis At the neurophysiological level it refers to the interactions between afferent and efferent information At the neurological and neuropsychological level it relates to the mutual dependencies between the sensory and the motor part of the brain or more precisely between sensory and motor functions of various parts of the brain In psychology the issue under debate concerns at a molecular level the relationship between perception and movement or at a more molar level the relations between cognition and action For the title of this book we deliberately decided to combine two terms that are taken from two of these levels in order to emphasize both the multilevel structure of the issues involved and the multidisciplinary nature of the following contributions Although the term cognition has been tremendously misused in recent years at least in psychology it is still the only term available to serve as a convenient collective name for all sorts of cognitive processes and functions Theoretical Issues in Reading Comprehension Rand J. Spiro, Bertram C. Bruce, William F. Brewer, 2017-11-03 Research in cognitive psychology linguistics and artificial intelligence the three disciplines that have the most direct application to an understanding of the mental processes in reading is presented in this multilevel work originally published in 1980 that attempts to provide a systematic and scientific basis for understanding and building a comprehensive theory of reading comprehension. The major focus is on understanding the processes involved in the comprehension of written text. Underlying most of the contributions is the assumption that skilled reading comprehension requires a coordination of text with context in a way that goes far beyond simply chaining together the meanings of a string of decoded words. The topics discussed are divided into five general areas: Global Issues, Text Structure, Language Knowledge of the World, and Inference Effects of Prior Language Experience, and Comprehension Strategies and Facilitators, and represent a broad base of methodology and data that should be of interest not only to those concerned with the reading process but also to basic science researchers in psychology, linguistics, artificial intelligence, and related disciplines.

Psycholinguistics Michael Garman, 1990-09-28 An introduction to psycholinguistics, the study of human language processing which deals with the central area of the linguistically mature monolingual adult's language abilities. Advances in Psychology, 1987. Human Information Processing Peter H. Lindsay, Donald A. Norman, 2013-10-22 Human Information Processing: An Introduction to Psychology, Second Edition, was written to reflect recent developments as well as anticipate new directions in this flourishing field. The ideas of human information processing are relevant to all human activities, most especially those of human interactions. The book discusses all the traditional areas and then goes beyond consciousness, states of awareness, multiple levels of processing, and of awareness, interpersonal communication, emotion, and stress. The book begins with an introduction to some of the more interesting phenomena of perception and poses some of the puzzles faced by those who would attempt to unravel the structures. Separate chapters cover the systems of most interest for human communication: the visual system and the auditory system; the structure of the nervous system and the systems of memory: sensory information storage, short-term memory, and long-term memory. Subsequent chapters deal with the different aspects of memory, including how memory is used in thought, in language, and in decision making. Also examined are the neurological basis of memory and the representation of knowledge within memory. Sims' Symptoms in the Mind Femi Oyebode, 2008-04-25 SIMS SYMPTOMS IN THE MIND has since its first publication in 1988 become established as the leading introductory textbook on clinical psychopathology. This new edition has been fully updated to include advances in neuropsychology and cognitive neuroscience, and changes can be found in the chapters on memory disturbance, disorders of time, pathology of perception, disorders of speech and language, affect and emotional disorders, and disorders of volition and execution. In some cases, novel classifications of the abnormalities under consideration have been provided together with additional pathological phenomena, including palinopsia, akinetopsia, Zeitraffer phenomenon, exosomesthesia, many of which have been rediscovered or imported from neurology. The popular and distinctive features are the use of figures, tables, and illustrative case examples, which have been further enhanced with additional case examples from the classical literature, autobiographical narratives, and fiction. New section headings provide firmer thematic unity to the content. Check boxes summarize important points such as classification of particular areas Additional examples of psychopathology are included which are drawn from a wide source including fiction autobiography and clinical textbooks Includes an extended range of abnormalities including those which have previously been neglected such as allosaesthesia palinaptia teleopsia pelopsia akinetopsia palinopsia and parapsychia Fully updated description of the theoretical aspects of memory and its disturbance Fully integrated neuropsychological concepts of imagery and internal mental representations in the chapter on abnormalities of perception

Pattern Recognition by Self-organizing Neural Networks Gail A. Carpenter, Stephen Grossberg, 1991
Pattern Recognition by Self Organizing Neural Networks presents the most recent advances in an area of research that is becoming vitally important in the fields of cognitive science neuroscience artificial intelligence and neural networks in general The 19 articles take up developments in competitive learning and computational maps adaptive resonance theory and specialized architectures and biological connections Introductory survey articles provide a framework for understanding the many models involved in various approaches to studying neural networks These are followed in Part 2 by articles that form the foundation for models of competitive learning and computational mapping and recent articles by Kohonen applying them to problems in speech recognition and by Hecht Nielsen applying them to problems in designing adaptive lookup tables Articles in Part 3 focus on adaptive resonance theory ART networks self-organizing pattern recognition systems whose top down template feedback signals guarantee their stable learning in response to arbitrary sequences of input patterns In Part 4 articles describe embedding ART modules into larger architectures and provide experimental evidence from neurophysiology event related potentials and psychology that support the prediction that ART mechanisms exist in the brain Contributors J P Banquet G A Carpenter S Grossberg R Hecht Nielsen T Kohonen B Kosko T W Ryan N A Schmajuk W Singer D Stork C von der Malsburg C L Winter
