The Strategy Factor in Successful

Language Learning Carol Griffiths, 2013-05-09 This book addresses fundamental questions regarding the relationships between successful language learning and strategy use and development according to learner situational or target variables. It considers strategy effectiveness from an individual point of view and discusses pedagogical issues especially relating to teacher perceptions and training classroom and learner factors methodology and content. The book begins by discussing underlying theoretical issues and then presents evidence from empirical studies in addition to presenting a quantitative view. The book also takes a qualitative look at strategy use by individuals. Rather than focusing on strategies divorced from the real world of the classroom, this book explores the issues from the teaching learning point of view. Strategic Language Learning Xuesong Gao, 2010 This monograph reports on a longitudinal inquiry into mainland Chinese undergraduates' language learning experiences at an English medium university in a multilingual setting with a focus on their strategic language learning efforts. This book examines the issue as to what extent language learners' strategic learning efforts depend on their choice if the element of choice is the defining characteristic of language learners' strategic learning behavior. The inquiry using a qualitative and ethnographic research approach reveals dynamic interaction between learners' agency and contextual conditions underlying the participants' strategic learning process. Such understanding informs pedagogical efforts to foster individual learners' capacity for strategic learning and their capacities in opening up and sustaining a social learning space for exercising their strategic learning capacity or utilizing their strategic learning knowledge. Racialized Identities in Second Language Learning Uju Anya, 2016-12-01 Winner of the 2019 AAAL First Book Award

Racialized Identities in Second Language Learning Speaking Blackness in Brazil provides a critical overview and original sociolinguistic analysis of the African American experience in second language learning. More broadly, this book introduces the idea of second language learning as transformative socialization: how learners, instructors, and their communities shape new communicative selves as they collaboratively construct and negotiate race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, and social class identities. Uju Anya's study follows African American college students learning Portuguese in Afro-Brazilian communities and their journeys in learning to do and speak blackness in Brazil. Video-recorded interactions, student journals, interviews, and writing assignments show how multiple intersecting identities are enacted and challenged in second language learning. Thematic critical and conversation analyses describe ways black Americans learn to speak their material, ideological, and symbolic selves in Portuguese and how linguistic action reproduces or resists power and inequity. The book addresses key questions on how learners can authentically and effectively participate in classrooms and target language communities to show that black students' racialized identities and investments in these communities greatly influence their success in second language learning and how successful others perceive them to be. Pragmatics & Language Learning, Volume 11 Kathleen Bardovi-Harlig, J. Cesar Felix-Brasdefer, Alwiya Saleh Omar, 2006 This volume features cutting edge research on L2 pragmatics from a wide range of theoretical and methodological approaches It offers fresh perspectives on standard topics such as the use and learning of speech acts and the pragmatic meanings of linguistic resources and the effect of planned intervention on pragmatic development in language instruction The chapters also document researchers increasing attention to different forms of computer mediated communication as environments for using and developing L2 pragmatic competence and of conversation analysis as an approach to different aspects of interaction in a variety of settings Publisher's website nflrc hawaii edu

Language Learning Strategies in Independent Settings Stella Hurd, Tim Lewis, 2008-10-03 Language learning strategies have been a topic of research for roughly three decades Broadly speaking that research has focused on classroom tuition predominantly at secondary level Increasingly however language learning occurs in independent settings whether at distance on Institution Wide Language Programmes IWLPs or in virtual environments Success in independent language learning is achieved by autonomous individuals with a capacity for self regulation Yet we still know relatively little about the specific means they use to learn effectively whether in terms of the affective strategies they employ to sustain motivation the metacognitive strategies required for planning monitoring and evaluating their learning or the specific cognitive strategies applied to difficult learning tasks These are all discussed and evaluated in Language Learning Strategies in Independent Settings
