

E.J. 9: ARPEGGIOS II

When I first started learning flute, this particular exercise threatened me the most out of this entire book – all the starting notes up in the 3rd register were such agony! It was arduous enough to take all the joy out of this book at that time. So, I'd like to advise beginners that you may skip this exercise until you're entirely comfortable with 3rd register. It's never too late to come back to E.J. 9 sometime later.

You may focus on one lettered example per day, using all the different chord variations provided. Explore each variation with different articulations along the way. In this exercise, be sure your high notes don't sound harsh or narrow. The more fingerings get challenging on the high notes, the more you should relax your hands and fingers.

(To be practiced with each of the following articulations)
