

The Politics of Recognition and Redistribution: Development, Tribal Identity Politics and Distributive Justice in India's Jharkhand

Ipshita Basu

ABSTRACT

This article illustrates how the potential of recognition-based politics to achieve distributive justice is determined by political structures and the power relations that constitute them. In response to Nancy Fraser's framework of social justice, it shows that the meaningful coordination of identity-based claims with distributive justice is constrained — not only by the content of the claims themselves, but also because redistributive demands are subverted through competing pursuits for power and legitimacy between rival political factions. The article describes how the separate-state movement for Jharkhand in Eastern India was de-radicalized by three instruments, namely, the reservation system, cultural nationalism and state development discourse. This explains why distributive measures do not feature prominently in the Jharkhand state and why recognition politics has taken a disciplined form in the electoral mainstream while distributive politics continues to be pursued through violent and extra-parliamentary means.

INTRODUCTION

Soon after its inauguration in November 2000, the State of Jharkhand in Eastern India issued the 'Vision 2010' document. The 'vision', rather predictably, was to modernize Jharkhand by prioritizing industrialization through commercial exploitation of its rich mineral and forest reserves, and to enable the 'backward' members of its population to integrate with mainstream development.

What has become of Jharkhand's vision? By August 2008, seventy-four Memoranda of Understanding (MoUs) with a gross investment of Rs. 2,95,857.75 crores (approximately US$ 70 million) had been signed between the Government of Jharkhand and private companies (Business Standard, 2009). However, according to figures disclosed by the Department of Industries in September 2008, these investments would cost around 98,547 acres of land to be transferred from local communities. While there is no accurate estimate of the number of people displaced by these projects,

The Liberal Script at the Beginning of the 21st Century Tanja A. Börzel, Johannes Gerschewski, Michael Zürn, 2024-10-10 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4.0 International licence It is free to read at Oxford Academic and offered as a free PDF download from OUP and selected open access locations 21st century liberalism is being contested on multiple fronts and by a wide range of actors To understand these challengers it is important to have a better grasp of their common target This book introduces the liberal script as an analytical concept that allows us to analyze and problematize liberal thinking as well as its different components and linkages and the tensions that they produce. What happens when the pursuit of market efficiency is incompatible with social justice? It is these tensions between the different components of the liberal script that are at the heart of the challenges against it. Different societies have resolved these tensions in different ways leading to a variety of liberal subscripts and their contestations. The volume integrates theoretical and methodological perspectives from different disciplines including political science, sociology, law, history, philosophy, post colonial studies and educational science. In demonstrating the theoretical and empirical added value of using the concept of liberal script, the volume presents a multifaceted and nuanced picture of what is at stake in the challenges to liberalism in the early 21st century. This volume has emerged from research carried out as part of the Cluster of Excellence Contestations of the Liberal Script SCRIPTS which analyzes the contemporary controversies about liberal ideas, institutions and practices on the national and international level from a historical, global and comparative perspective. It connects academic expertise in the social sciences and area studies and collaborates with research institutions in all world regions. Operating since 2019 and funded by the German Research Foundation DFG, SCRIPTS unites eight major Berlin based research institutions: Freie Universität Berlin, the Humboldt Universität zu Berlin, the Berlin Social Science Center WZB, the Hertie School, the German Institute for Economic Research DIW, the Berlin branch of the German Institute of Global and Area Studies GIGA, the Centre for East European and International Studies ZOiS and the Leibniz Zentrum Moderner Orient ZMO.

Industrialising Rural India Kenneth Bo Nielsen, Patrik Oskarsson, 2016-10-04. Rapid industrialisation is promoted by many as the most feasible way of rejuvenating the Indian economy and as a way of generating employment on a large scale. At the same time, the transfer of land from rural communities and indigenous groups for industrial parks, mining or Special Economic Zones has emerged as perhaps the most explosive issue in India over the past decade. Industrialising Rural India sheds light on crucial political and social dynamics that unfold today as India seeks to accelerate industrial growth. The volume examines key aspects that are implicated in current processes of industrialisation in rural India, including the evolution of industrial and related policies, the contested role of land transfers, dispossession and the destruction of the natural resource base, more generally, and the popular resistance against industrial projects, extractive industries and Special Economic Zones. Combining the work of scholars long established in their respective fields with the refreshing approach of younger scholars, Industrialising Rural India seeks to chart new ways in the study of contemporary industrialisation and its associated challenges in India. This cutting edge interdisciplinary work will be of interest to scholars working on industrial development and land questions in India and South Asia, alongside those with an interest in sociology, political science and development research.
