Landscape Planning with Ecosystem Services Christina von Haaren,Andrew A. Lovett,Christian Albert,2019-06-25 Human well being depends in many ways on maintaining the stock of natural resources which deliver the services from which human s benefit However these resources and flows of services are increasingly threatened by unsustainable and competing land uses Particular threats exist to those public goods whose values are not well represented in markets or whose deterioration will only affect future generations As market forces alone are not sufficient effective means for local and regional planning are needed in order to safeguard scarce natural resources coordinate land uses and create sustainable landscape structures This book argues that a solution to such challenges in Europe can be found by merging the landscape planning tradition with ecosystem services concepts Landscape planning has strengths in recognition of public benefits and implementation mechanisms while the ecosystem services approach makes the connection between the status of natural assets and human well being more explicit It can also provide an economic perspective focused on individual preferences and benefits which helps validate the acceptability of environmental planning goals Thus linking landscape planning and ecosystem services provides a two way benefit creating a usable science to meet the needs of local and regional decision making The book is structured around the

Driving forces Pressures States Impacts Responses framework providing an introduction to relevant concepts methodologies and techniques It presents a new ecosystem services informed approach to landscape planning that constitutes both a framework and toolbox for students and practitioners to address the environmental and landscape challenges of 21st century Europe

Planning and the Rural Environment Joan Davidson, Gerald Wibberley, 2016-04-20 Planning and the Rural Environment examines the environmental issues affecting countryside planning Emphasis is placed on the look and feel of the open countryside the function and appearance of the rural environment rather than the problems of its people and the settlements in which they live Also discussed is the conflict of interest generated between some of the major planning systems concerned with the development of rural activities and the protection of rural resources Comprised of 13 chapters this volume begins with an assessment of conflicting views of how a countryside of the future should develop and the degree of control and direction that should take place The following chapters consider how the emerging range of environmental problems and opportunities in rural planning can best be illustrated In particular the dominance of agriculture as a rural activity is analyzed together with forest and woodland management leisure activity in the countryside and conservation of resources and wildlife The next section is devoted to uplands and the urban fringe paying particular attention to some of the ways in which rural interests interact in two very different areas Finally the development of rural planning is reviewed and issues that are expected to shape the countryside of the future are considered This book should be of interest to postgraduate students of rural planning and specialists in various fields of countryside planning
