Language Acquisition And Conceptual Development:

Language Acquisition and Conceptual Development Melissa Bowerman, Stephen C. Levinson, 2001-01-11 Recent years have seen a revolution in our knowledge of how children learn to think and speak In this volume leading scholars from these rapidly evolving fields of research examine the relationship between child language acquisition and cognitive development At first sight advances in the two areas seem to have moved in opposing directions the study of language acquisition has been especially concerned with diversity explaining how children learn languages of widely different types while the study of cognitive development has focused on uniformity clarifying how children build on fundamental presumably universal concepts This book brings these two vital strands of investigation into close dialogue suggesting a synthesis in which the process of language acquisition may interact with early cognitive development It provides empirical contributions based on a variety of languages populations and ages and theoretical discussions that cut across the disciplines of psychology linguistics and anthropology

Early Category and Concept Development : Making Sense of the Blooming, Buzzing Confusion David H. Rakison Assistant Professor of Psychology Carnegie Mellon University, Lisa M. Oakes Associate Professor of Psychology University of Iowa, 2003-01-09 Whether or not infants earliest perception of the world is a blooming buzzing confusion it is not long before they come to perceive structure and order among the objects and events around them At the core of this process and cognitive development in general is the ability to categorize to group events objects or properties together and to form mental representations or concepts that encapsulate the commonalities and structure of these categories Categorization is the primary means of coding experience underlying not only perceptual and reasoning processes but also inductive inference and language The aim of this book is to bring together the most recent findings and theories about the origins and early development of categorization and conceptual abilities Despite recent advances in our understanding of this area a number of hotly debated issues remain at the center of the controversy over categorization Researchers continue to ask questions such as Which mechanisms for categorization are available at birth and which emerge later What are the relative roles of perceptual similarity and nonobservable properties in early classification What is the role of contextual variation in categorization by infants and children Do different experimental procedures reveal the same kind of knowledge Can computational models simulate infant and child categorization How do computational models inform behavioral research What is the impact of language on category development How does language partition the world This book is the first to address these and other key questions within a single volume The authors present a diverse set of views representing cutting edge empirical and theoretical advances in the field The result is a thorough review of empirical contributions to the literature and a wealth of fresh theoretical perspectives on early categorization

Concept Development and the Development of Word Meaning T. B. Seiler, W. Wannenmacher, 2012-12-06 This volume owes its existence to many different sources and influences It is based on a meeting that took place from April 30 to May 2 1982 at the University of Technology in Darmstadt The idea for that meeting came while we were elaborating a research program on concept development and the development of word meaning we were inspired by Werner Deutsch of the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics in Nijmegen The Netherlands and by the Volkswagen Foundation in Hannover Federal Republic of Germany to organize an international conference on the same topic We set out to invite a long list of colleagues and we only regret that not all of them were able to attend This volume should not be viewed as the proceedings of that conference On the one hand it does not include all of the papers presented there and on the other hand some of our colleagues who were unable to attend were nevertheless willing to write contributions Furthermore some who did present papers at the conference revised and reformulated them or even submitted completely new ones for this book We feel however that in the end we have arranged a valuable collection of work in the theory and research of a field that has occupied not only psychologists and linguists but also philosophers anthropologists and many others for a long time

Perspectives on Language and Thought Susan A. Gelman, James P. Byrnes, 1991-10-25 This book presents current observational and experimental research on the links between thought and language in such children

Crosslinguistic Approaches to the Psychology of Language Jiansheng Guo, Elena Lieven, Nancy Budwig, Susan Ervin-Tripp, Keiko Nakamura, Seyda Ozcaliskan, 2010-10-18 This volume covers state of the art research in the field of crosslinguistic approaches to the psychology of language The forty chapters cover a wide range of topics that represent the many research interests of a pioneer Dan Isaac Slobin who has been a major intellectual and creative force in the field of child language development linguistics and psycholinguistics for the past four decades Slobin has insisted on a rigorous crosslinguistic approach in his attempt to identify universal developmental patterns in language learning to explore the effects of particular types of languages on psycholinguistic processes to determine the extent to which universals of language and language behavior are determined by modality vocal auditory vs manual visual and finally to investigate the relation between linguistic and cognitive processes In this volume researchers take up the challenge of the differences between languages to forward research in four major areas with which Slobin has been concerned throughout his career language learning in crosslinguistic perspective spoken and sign languages the integration of language specific factors in narrative skill theoretical issues in typology language development and language change and the relationship between language and cognition All chapters are written by leading researchers currently working in these fields who are Slobin's colleagues collaborators or former students in linguistics psychology anthropology and cognitive science Each section starts with an introductory chapter that connects the themes of the chapters and reviews Slobin's contribution in the context of past research trends and future directions The whole volume focuses squarely on the central argument universals of human language and of its development are embodied and revealed in its diverse manifestations and utilization Crosslinguistic Approaches to the Study of Language is a key resource for those interested in the range of differences between languages and how this impacts on learning cognition and language change and a tribute to Dan Slobin's momentous contribution to the field
