The background of the image is a detailed engraving. In the foreground, a man with a long, flowing beard and a turban is shown in profile, looking down. His turban is intricately patterned with concentric circles and lines. Behind him, a large crowd of people, also wearing traditional headwear, is visible, though they are less distinct. The overall style is that of a 19th-century engraving, with fine lines and a monochromatic brown color scheme.

The book of Job engages with the issue of pain and suffering Job asked the same question that we have probably asked a hundred times why do the righteous suffer In his pain he decided to file a case against God but he rescinded in a moment of truth He realized God's purpose for allowing pain was to have a deeper experience of the living God This commentary expounds and explains how one can see a good God in the midst of life's sufferings The Asia Bible Commentary Series empowers Christian believers in Asia to read the Bible from within their respective contexts Holistic in its approach to the text each exposition of the biblical books combines exegesis and application The ultimate goal is to strengthen the Body of Christ in Asia by providing a pastoral and contextual exposition of every book of the Bible      The Book of Esther in Modern Research Leonard Jay Greenspoon, Sidnie White Crawford, 2003-01-01 The proceedings of a symposium entitled Esther 2000 held in Lincoln and Omaha Nebraska in April 2000 the book contains a collection of essays that engages all aspects of the biblical book of Esther From questions of textual criticism to the history of rabbinic interpretation to speculation on the modern form of commentary this collection is sure to contain something for everyone interested in the book of Esther Contributors include such well known Esther scholars as Michael Fox David Clines and Carey Moore      Ezra, Nehemiah, Esther, Job John Stafford Wright, 1968      Ezra-Job J. groundbreaking reinterpretation of early Judaism during the millennium before the study of the Bible took center stage Early Judaism is often described as the religion of the book par excellence a movement built around the study of the Bible and steeped in a culture of sacred bookishness that evolved from an unrelenting focus on a canonical text But in The Closed Book Rebecca Scharbach Wollenberg argues that Jews didn't truly embrace the biblical text until nearly a thousand years after the Bible was first canonized She tells the story of the intervening centuries during which even rabbis seldom opened a Bible and many rabbinic authorities remained deeply ambivalent about the biblical text as a source of sacred knowledge Wollenberg shows that in place of the biblical text early Jewish thinkers embraced a form of biblical revelation that has now largely disappeared from practice Somewhere between the fixed transcripts of the biblical Written Torah and the fluid traditions of the rabbinic Oral Torah a third category of revelation was imagined by these rabbinic thinkers In this third Torah memorized spoken formulas of the biblical tradition came to be envisioned as a distinct version of the biblical revelation And it was believed that this living tradition of recitation passed down by human mouths unbound by the limitations of written text provided a fuller and more authentic witness to the scriptural revelation at Sinai In this way early rabbinic authorities were able to leverage the idea of biblical revelation while quarantining the biblical text itself from communal life The result is a revealing reinterpretation of the people of the book before they became people of the book the sunday school teachers endure the suffering described in the biblical book but the efforts of countless commentators interpreters and creative rewriters whose explanations more often than not challenged the protagonist's righteousness in order to preserve Divine justice Beginning with five critical essays on the specific efforts of ancient medieval and modern Jewish writers to make sense of the biblical book this volume concludes with a detailed survey of the place of Job in the Talmud and Midrashic corpus in medieval biblical commentary in ethical mystical and philosophical tracts as well as in poetry and creative writing in a wide variety of Jewish languages from around the world from the second to sixteenth centuries
