

foreseeing has been going on when it was designed. Dedicated areas for teaching, meetings, presentations, dining, libraries, media library, play grounds and examination halls are all reflective of the diverse needs of humans to achieve the objective of education.

A very important part of the university is its students. Keeping in view the federal nature of our university it is apparent why it attracts so many foreign students. For me the most interesting phenomenon is the mode of communication that exists between these foreign students. Whenever I see them talking, there is a lot that their body language and gestures express; as compared to their words. Though English is the medium to connect them; yet their level of expertise of the language alters the way they react and reciprocate to each other's messages.

Details

Of all the objects observed, two objects that appeal to me include;

- The communication between students who speak different languages; and
- University as a space of education and its operation.

Communication is a vital part of our day-to-day interactions. Generally considered to be divided into the verbal and non-verbal forms; there are a number of other attributes which do not follow the normal communicative patterns. Of my interest is the communication between students of different cultures and how they perceive each other's thoughts.

It is quite often evident that whenever two student with different languages start to interact, the start often includes gestures which are indicative of greetings. Japanese students on our campus would bend forward during the start of communication. Chinese would shake their head a little while bending a bit. Asians would either shake hand like the Westerners or avoid shaking hands if those who are meeting are of opposite sexes etc. If they happen to be from different countries, the most prominent observation is that linguistic clues are replaced by hand gestures or body movements. The choice of words becomes a challenge to express the concept in its simplest form. It is very common that under such circumstances, both the parties start to speak simultaneously, expecting the other to listen or at least understand what

Philosophy of railroads and other essays T.C. Keefer,1972-12-15 T C Keefer s Philosophy of Railroads is one of the greatest hymns of praise to the age of iron and steel ever written in North America Better than any other document it shows why railroads were seen as the arteries of the Canadian nation during the nineteenth century This volume brings four of Keefer s works together with a brilliant introduction by H V Nelles It includes Philosophy of Railroads originally published in 1849 a lecture in which Keefer outlines his hopes for the development of the Montreal region and in passing reveals the philosophical foundation upon which they rest the Sequel to the Philosophy of Railroads a fascinating illustration of the problems the first engineers faced in raising their trade from a scramble for money and prestige into a legitimate profession and a final essay on railways written in the early 1860s expressing Keefer s disillusionment at the failure of railways to fulfill their promise At one level these essays say a great deal about railroads and about Canadian society in the nineteenth century at another they represent a cycle from enthusiastic idealism to realism in one man's thought and at yet another they introduce us to the historian's problem of establishing relationships between ideas and the material conditions within which they appear The Hermon Prize Essays. Essays on the Prevention of Explosions and Accidents in Coal Mines ... Edward Hermon, 1874 Writing from Sources
