BOOK JACKET

Beyond Comfort Zones in Multiculturalism Sandra Jackson, Jose Solis, 1995-10-24 For peoples whose legal agreements treaties and other accords and conventions with the United States have been violated multiculturalism as a pedagogical tool often becomes suspect of reinforcing the continued reification and abstraction of their cultures and nations with little if any real meaning for educational and social transformation The continued oppression and repression of the exercise of self determination for African Americans the persistence of policies aimed at the destruction of indigenous populations and land the insidious continuation of classical colonialism in the case of Puerto Rico are all vivid reminders to these peoples of the racist classist sexist and homophobic patriarchy that characterizes their status. In order to restore people's rights to fully determine their own histories, Jackson and Solis point out that it is imperative to destroy the material foundations that breed and recycle the ideology, discourse, and cultural practices of domination. It is not enough to celebrate diversity and difference; there must be grand scale social, political, economic, and educational transformation. Teaching Diverse Populations Etta R. Hollins, Joyce Elaine King, Warren C.

Hayman, 1994-01-01 This book presents current knowledge about teaching culturally diverse populations traditionally underserved in the nation's public schools. It approaches the challenge of improving public school education for these students in a variety of ways, including relating of cultural and experiential knowledge to classroom instruction, examining the behaviors of teachers who are effective with culturally diverse populations, analyzing effective school models, reviewing models of effective instruction, and exploring ethnic identity as a variable in the formula for school success. The discussions reveal significant insights about the implications and shortcomings of existing knowledge and its application, and offer directions for future research. Disintegrating the Musical Arthur Knight, 2002-08-14

From the earliest sound films to the present, American cinema has represented African Americans as decidedly musical. Disintegrating the Musical tracks and analyzes this history of musical representations of African Americans from blacks and whites in blackface to black cast musicals to jazz shorts from sorrow songs to show tunes to bebop and beyond. Arthur Knight focuses on American film's classic sound era when Hollywood studios made eight all-black cast musicals a focus on Afro-America unparalleled in any other genre. It was during this same period that the first black film stars Paul Robeson, Louis Armstrong, Lena Horne, Harry Belafonte, Dorothy Dandridge emerged, not coincidentally from the ranks of musical performers. That these films made so much of the connection between African Americans and musicality was somewhat ironic, Knight points out, because they did so in a form, song, and a genre, the musical, celebrating American social integration, community, and the marriage of opposites, even as the films themselves were segregated and played before even more strictly segregated audiences. Disintegrating the Musical covers territory both familiar: Show Boat, Stormy Weather, Porgy and Bess, and obscure musical films by pioneer black director Oscar Micheaux; Lena Horne's first film The Duke; Is Tops' specialty numbers tucked into better known features; and lost classics like the short Jammin' the Blues. It considers the social and cultural contexts from which these films arose and how African American critics and audiences responded to them. Finally, Disintegrating the Musical shows how this history connects with the present practices of contemporary musical films like O Brother Where Art Thou and Bamboozled. The
