Flexibility in Adaptation Planning Mohanasundar Radhakrishnan, 2017-12-01 The magnitude and urgency of the need to adapt to climate change is such that addressing it has been taken up by the United Nations as one of the sustainable development goals Goal 13 SDG13 in 2015 SDG13 emphasises the need to strengthen resilience and adaptive capacity to climate related hazards and natural disasters Coping with urban floods is one of the major needs of climate adaptation where integration of climate change responses into flood risk management policies strategies and planning at international national regional and local levels is now the norm However much of this integration lacks effectiveness or real commitment from stakeholders involved in adaptation planning and implementation Hence this research has focused on integrating flexibility based adaptation responses into an urban flood risk management context The research has synthesised flexible adaptation practices from several disciplines including information technology automobile and aerospace manufacturing The outcomes of the research are brought together in a framework for structuring local adaptation responses and an adaptation planning process based on flexibility concepts The outcomes provide a way to assist with the identification of the appropriate nature and type of flexibility required where flexibility can best be incorporated and when is the most appropriate time to implement the flexible adaptation responses in the context of urban flooding

Foundations of Computational Linguistics Roland Hausser, 2013-03-09 As an interdisciplinary field computational linguistics has its sources in several areas of science each with its own goals methods and historical background Thereby it has remained unclear which components fit together and which do not This suggests three possible approaches to designing a computational linguistics textbook The first approach proceeds from one's own school of thought usually determined of study rather than by a well informed deliberation by chance such as one's initial place or rate choice The goal is to extend the inherited theoretical framework or method to as many aspects of language analysis as possible As a consequence the issue of compatibility with other approaches in the field need not be addressed and one's assumptions are questioned at best in connection with puzzling problems The second approach takes the viewpoint of an objective observer and aims to survey the field as completely as possible However the large number of different schools methods and tasks necessitates a subjective selection Furthermore the presumed neutrality provides no incentive to investigate the compatibility between the elements selected The third approach aims at solving a comprehensive functional task with the different To arrive at the desired solution suitability of approaches being ordered relative to it and compatibility of the different elements adopted must be investigated with regard to the task at hand

Acids Rebecca Christine Underwood,1994 In Pursuit of Meaning Baruch A. Levine,2011-06-23 In a career spanning almost five decades Baruch Levine s numerous publications reflect his wide ranging interests and areas of expertise in the study of the Hebrew Bible the ancient Near East and early Judaism In Pursuit of Meaning brings together 51 of the most important articles that Professor Levine produced during his years at Brandeis University 1962 69 and New York University 1969 2000 emeritus 2000 The first volume containing 27 articles focuses on the study of religion in the biblical and ancient Near Eastern worlds from a number of perspectives ranging from close philological analysis of written sources to anthropological studies of ancient cultic practices In the 24 articles of the second volume Levine engages broader aspects of ancient Near Eastern society from legal institutions of various types to larger societal forms of organization This volume also contains some of his more incisive lexicographical and philological contributions to the study of the Hebrew and Aramaic languages The flavor of Prof Levine s work is captured in this paragraph from his introduction to these two volumes Looking back and reviewing my writings I realize what it is that I have been seeking all along I have been in pursuit of meaning employing scholarly methods primarily philology and semantics to the exegesis of ancient Near Eastern texts preserved in several languages principally the Hebrew Bible I regard language as the key to meaning This conclusion would appear to be self evident and yet philology is often sidelined in favor of engaging larger frameworks Most of all I challenge the notion that we already know the meaning of the words and clauses central to the texts under investigation and may proceed directly to other considerations without first re examining the smaller units Again and again that policy has resulted in flawed interpretation and in missed opportunities for learning This is not to say that scholars should stop at the smaller units and indeed the tendency to do so has been largely responsible for the reaction against Semitic philology so noticeable since the latter part of the 20th century It is our challenge to move outward from focal points to the circumference from text to context from content to structure
