Buchanan,2020-11-25 This book presents a distinct ethically robust framework for improving population health when the major causes of disease death and disability are closely associated with human behaviors Rather than relying on a scientific technological strategy aimed at developing ever more powerful and effective techniques for changing behaviors a humanistic approach recognizes the unique human capacity for dignity and moral decision making As an essential alternative to the scientific assumption of determinism a humanistic framework is based on the equally viable assumption that human beings have the capacity to exercise autonomy in pursuing their life plans If people can choose how they want to live their lives then it is imperative to respect and cultivate their autonomy in making health promoting decisions A scientific approach is unsurpassed at identifying effective means for stopping and killing bacteria the same methods are not appropriate however when the objective is to alter human behavior In a humanistic framework it is important to acknowledge that autonomous choices are not completely unrestrained the human condition has significant physical and social limitations and that certain readily identifiable social groups face much greater constraints than others most significantly due to poverty and racism As explained and justified in this book the most important task for health promotion is to promote autonomy and to do this by redressing the hugely disparate yet corrigible barriers faced by people occupying distinct social positions This project is a matter of social justice not a scientific and technological problem to be solved but a moral and political endeavor to engage fellow citizens in strengthening our social institutions to enable everyone to realize their innate capacities to the fullest extent possible The book provides ethical standards case studies and concrete practical analogies to demonstrate the feasibility and benefits of moving the field of health promotion in a new humanistic direction

An Integrated Framework for Assessing the Value of Community-Based Prevention Institute of Medicine, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Committee on Valuing Community-Based, Non-Clinical Prevention Policies and Wellness Strategies, 2012-11-29 During the past century the major causes of morbidity and mortality in the United States have shifted from those related to communicable diseases to those due to chronic diseases Just as the major causes of morbidity and mortality have changed so too has the understanding of health and what makes people healthy or ill Research has documented the importance of the social determinants of health for example socioeconomic status and education that affect health directly as well as through their impact on other health determinants such as risk factors Targeting interventions toward the conditions associated with today's challenges to living a healthy life requires an increased emphasis on the factors that affect the current cause of morbidity and mortality factors such as the social determinants of health Many community based prevention interventions target such conditions Community based prevention interventions offer three distinct strengths First because the intervention is implemented population wide it is inclusive and not dependent on access to a health care system Second by directing strategies at an entire population an intervention can reach individuals at all levels of risk And finally some lifestyle and behavioral risk factors are shaped by conditions not under an individual's control For example encouraging an individual to eat healthy food when none is accessible undermines the potential for successful behavioral change Community based prevention interventions can be designed to affect environmental and social conditions that are out of the reach of clinical services Four foundations the California Endowment the de Beaumont Foundation the W K Kellogg Foundation and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation asked the Institute of Medicine to convene an expert committee to develop a framework for assessing the value of community based non clinical prevention policies and wellness strategies especially those targeting the prevention of long term chronic diseases The charge to the committee was to define community based non clinical prevention policy and wellness strategies define the value for community based non clinical prevention policies and wellness strategies and analyze current frameworks used to assess the value of community based non clinical prevention policies and wellness strategies including the methodologies and measures used and the short and long term impacts of such prevention policy and wellness strategies on health care spending and public health An Integrated Framework for Assessing the Value of Community Based Prevention summarizes the committee's findings Health
