Health Planning And Regulation Decisionmaking:

Health Planning and Regulation Drew Altman, Richard Greene, Harvey M. Sapolsky, 1981 Encyclopedia of Medical Decision Making Michael W. Kattan, 2009-08-15 Decision making is a critical element in the field of medicine that can lead to life or death outcomes yet it is an element fraught with complex and conflicting variables diagnostic and therapeutic uncertainties patient preferences and values and costs Together decisions made by physicians patients insurers and policymakers determine the quality of health care quality that depends inherently on counterbalancing risks and benefits and competing objectives such as maximizing life expectancy versus optimizing quality of life or quality of care versus economic realities Broadly speaking concepts in medical decision making MDM may be divided into two major categories prescriptive and descriptive Work in the area of prescriptive MDM investigates how medical decisions should be done using complicated analyses and algorithms to determine cost effectiveness measures prediction methods and so on In contrast descriptive MDM studies how decisions actually are made involving human judgment biases social influences patient factors and so on The Encyclopedia of Medical Decision Making gives a gentle introduction to both categories revealing how medical and healthcare decisions are actually made and constrained and how physician healthcare management and patient decision making can be improved to optimize health outcomes Key Features Discusses very general issues that span many aspects of MDM including bioethics health policy and economics disaster simulation modeling medical informatics the psychology of decision making shared and team medical decision making social moral and religious factors end of life decision making assessing patient preference and patient adherence and more Incorporates both quantity and quality of life in optimizing a medical decision Considers characteristics of the decisionmaker and how those characteristics influence their decisions Presents outcome measures to judge the quality or impact of a medical decision Examines some of the more commonly encountered biostatistical methods used in prescriptive decision making Provides utility assessment techniques that facilitate quantitative medical decision making Addresses the many different assumption perspectives the decision maker might choose from when trying to optimize a decision Offers mechanisms for defining MDM algorithms With comprehensive and authoritative coverage by experts in the fields of medicine decision science and cognitive psychology and healthcare management this two volume Encyclopedia is a must have resource for any academic library Risk assessment and risk management in regulatory decision-making United States. Presidential/Congressional Commission on Risk Assessment and Risk Management, 1997 Advance Directives: Rethinking Regulation, Autonomy & Healthcare Decision-Making Hui Yun Chan, 2018-10-03 This book offers a new perspective on advance directives through a combined legal ethical and philosophical inquiry In addition to making a significant and novel theoretical contribution to the field the book has an interdisciplinary and international appeal The book will help academics healthcare professionals legal practitioners and the educated reader to understand the challenges of creating and implementing advance directives anticipate clinical realities and preparing advance directives that reflect a higher degree of assurance in terms of implementation Real-world Data and Real-World Evidence in Regulatory Decision Making Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences, 2024-05-29 In recent years many medicines regulatory agencies have expressed increased willingness to consider real world evidence RWE that derives from the review and or analysis of real world data RWD to support claims of efficacy or effectiveness as well as of safety This increased willingness is changing the regulatory environment in which RWE is generated and used This consensus report aims to describe the potential use of RWE for decision making RWD and data sources key scientific considerations in the generation of RWE and ethical and governance issues in using RWD The intended audience for this report includes medicinal product regulators healthcare payers health care and medicinal products industries researchers bioethicists patients and health care professionals This report was developed to inform discussions about the use of RWD and RWE for regulatory and health care decision making including decisions to make a product available for use authorisation to cover the costs of its use reimbursement and to use a product for a particular patient clinical use This report reflects the opinions of the Council for International Organizations of Medical Sciences CIOMS Working Group XIII on Real world data and real world evidence in regulatory decision making and it was finalised after considering comments received during a public consultation An Introduction to Health Planning for Developing Health Systems Andrew Green, 2007-01-11 Health planning is a critical component when responding to the health needs of low and middle income countries characterised by particularly stringent resource constraints The major communicable diseases such as AIDS TB and malaria often appear in parallel with growing non communicable diseases including heart disease and diabetes and yet resources are often less than the levels recommended by the World Health Organisation for basic health care The new edition of this well respected text explains the importance of health planning in both developing regions such as Africa and those in transition such as Central and Eastern Europe It stresses the importance of understanding the national and international context in which planning occurs and provides an up to date analysis of the major current policy issues including health reforms Separate chapters are dedicated to the distinct issues of finance for health care and human resource planning The various techniques used at each stage of the planning process are explained starting with the situational analysis and then looking in turn at priority setting option appraisal programming implementation monitoring and evaluation The book ends by examining the challenges facing planners in the 21st century particularly in the light of growing globalisation A major theme of the book is the need to recognise and reconcile the inevitable tension that lies between value judgements and rational decision making As such in addition to introducing techniques such as costing and economic appraisal it also outlines techniques such as stakeholder analysis for understanding the relative attitudes and power of different groups in planning decisions Each chapter includes a comprehensive bibliography including key websites a summary and exercises to help the reader practise techniques and better understand the content The book argues that all

health professionals and community groups should be involved in the planning process for it to be effective and will therefore appeal to anyone involved in planning

Decision Making in a World of Comparative Effectiveness Research Howard G. Birnbaum, Paul E. Greenberg, 2017-05-05 In the past decade there has been a worldwide evolution in evidence based medicine that focuses on real world Comparative Effectiveness Research CER to compare the effects of one medical treatment versus another in real world settings While most of this burgeoning literature has focused on research findings data and methods Howard Birnbaum and Paul Greenberg both of Analysis Group have edited a book that provides a practical guide to decision making using the results of analysis and interpretation of CER Decision Making in a World of Comparative Effectiveness contains chapters by senior industry executives key opinion leaders accomplished researchers and leading attorneys involved in resolving disputes in the life sciences industry The book is aimed at users and decision makers involved in the life sciences industry rather than those doing the actual research This book appeals to those who commission CER within the life sciences industry pharmaceutical biologic and device manufacturers government both public and private payers as well as decision makers of all levels both in the US and globally

Models in Environmental Regulatory Decision Making National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Committee on Models in the Regulatory Decision Process, 2007-08-25 Many regulations issued by the U S Environmental Protection Agency EPA are based on the results of computer models Models help EPA explain environmental phenomena in settings where direct observations are limited or unavailable and anticipate the effects of agency policies on the environment human health and the economy Given the critical role played by models the EPA asked the National Research Council to assess scientific issues related to the agency s selection and use of models in its decisions The book recommends a series of guidelines and principles for improving agency models and decision making processes The centerpiece of the book s recommended vision is a life cycle approach to model evaluation which includes peer review corroboration of results and other activities This will enhance the agency s ability to respond to requirements from a 2001 law on information quality and improve policy development and implementation

Data-Driven Decision Making in Fragile Contexts Alexander Hamilton, Craig Hammer, 2017-06-16 The need for evidence based decision making at all levels of government is perhaps greatest in fragile settings Data deficiencies contribute to state fragility and exacerbate constraints on the capacity to provide basic services public security and the rule of law The lack of robust good quality data can also have a disabling effect on government efforts to manage political conflict Indeed the lack of data can worsen conflict since violent settings pose substantial challenges to knowledge generation capture and application The development of sustainable and professional data literate stakeholders who are able to produce and increase the quality and accessibility of official statistics can help to improve development outcomes Good quality and reliable statistics are required to track the progress of development policies through the monitoring of performance indicators and targets and to ensure that public resources are achieving results. Although reliable data alone cannot have a transformative effect without the right contextual incentives, they constitute an essential prerequisite for greater accountability and more efficient decision making.

Data Driven Decision Making in Fragile Contexts Evidence from Sudan explores methods and insights for data collection and use in fragile contexts with a focus on findings from Sudan. It begins by posing several questions on the political economy of data and then sets out a framework for assessing the validity, reliability, and potential impact of data on decision making in fragile settings. It then provides insights regarding the challenges associated with data driven decision making in Sudan derived from the 2014 United Kingdom's Department for International Development Sudanese household survey. Featured are data driven analyses of diverse topics from public service delivery to the interplay of governance, trust, and state legitimacy. As the data revolution and the advent of the Sustainable Development Goals herald an increasing need to solicit the perceptions and experiences of program beneficiaries, the impetus to develop and deploy good quality survey instruments will increase. This volume provides an important proof of concept that this type of endeavor is both feasible and useful in fragile contexts and in combination with other important data collection tools can be effectively utilized to enrich the evidence base of decision making in these settings.

Applying a Health Lens to Decision Making in Non-Health Sectors Institute of Medicine, Board on Population Health and Public Health Practice, Roundtable on Population Health Improvement, 2014-08-21

Health is influenced by a wide range of factors, many of which fall outside of the health care delivery sector. These determinants of health include, for example, the characteristics of how people live, work, learn, and play. Decision and policy making in areas such as transportation, housing, and education at different levels of government and in the private sector can have far reaching impacts on health. Throughout the United States, there has been increasing dialogue on incorporating a health perspective into policies, programs, and projects outside the health field.

Applying a Health Lens to Decision Making in Non-Health Sectors is the summary of a workshop convened in September 2013 by the Institute of Medicine Roundtable on Population Health Improvement to foster cross sectoral dialogue and consider the opportunities for and barriers to improving the conditions for health in the course of achieving other societal objectives, e.g., economic development, efficient public transit. The roundtable engaged members outside experts and stakeholders on three core issues supporting fruitful interaction.

between primary care and public health strengthening governmental public health and exploring community action in transforming the conditions that influence the public's health This report is a discussion of health in all policies approaches to promote consideration for potential health effects in policy making in many relevant domains such as education transportation and housing
