Road Back Again Edward T Wilson,2012-06-14 Many of my poems centre on the theme of having a positive or moral outcome We are all the same in that we all feel emotions regardless of who we are I have always been of the opinion to use rhyme as a simple means to express as concisely as I can the reasons why we feel the way that we do and perhaps the reasons why we do the things that we do For whatever takes place in life we are all susceptible to the same emotions regardless of our varying experiences In turn it is because of what we feel and experience that make us who we are or rather who we have the potential to become for better or worse It is my intention that my poems serve as a reminder or conversely serve as an additional insight into the fact that we can all rise above our circumstances Oft times we fall short and in doing so fail to see our worth or the worth in otherseither because we fail to remember or fail to do i e to remember to do what is necessary to help ourselves and to be there for others I have sought to make these poems as insightful as I could enough to see that we all
