The Israel Journal of Psychiatry and Related Sciences ,1995 Crisis Services and Hospital Crises Dylan Tomlinson,Kevin Allen,2018-12-17 First published in 1999 This text examines the impasse in the development of alternatives to hospitals drawing on the experience of both crisis service users and providers and evidence of the effectiveness of such services The book concludes that crisis services are preferred by users are usually more cost effective and often more clinically effective than acute admissions wards It offers a number of policy suggestions to advance the role of crisis services including monitoring evaluation and development centres or programmes being established on a national basis and joint training between crisis service and hospitals Quality of Life and Mental Health Services Keith Bridges,Dr Peter Huxley,Peter Huxley,Hadi Mohamad,Joseph Oliver,2005-10-05 This book is about the lives of patients about the health and social care services provided to help them and about ways of examining the impact these services make on them Based on the authors experience of using and developing a particular operational measure the Lancashire Quality of Life Profile which has been used successfully in many different studies and countries it provides managers and practitioners in mental health with valuable normative data insights and ideas about the role of QOL in service evaluation BMJ,1995 Mental Health Care for Nurses Anthony Harrison,Chris Hart,2009-02-26 Mental health is a significant factor in providing effective nursing care for patients in hospital and residential settings Non mental health nursing staff often lack the confidence knowledge and skills to effectively meet the mental health needs of patients who are experiencing psychiatric problems and psychological distress Mental Health Care for Nurses Applying mental health skills in the general hospital provides a step by step guide which will help nurses identify these needs and address them in practice The first part of Mental Health Care for Nurses Applying mental health skills in the general hospital explores the context of mental health care in hospital and residential settings and provides a practical framework for assessment planning and delivery of mental health care The second part explores specific topics such as self harm and suicide prevention caring for the patient displaying challenging behaviour maternal and perinatal mental health problems mental health problems associated with old age mood disorders and illicit drug and alcohol dependence Seminars in General Adult Psychiatry George Stein,Greg Wilkinson,2007-04 This second edition of Seminars in General Adult Psychiatry provides a highly readable and comprehensive account of modern adult psychiatry Key features of the first edition that have been retained are the detailed clinical descriptions of psychiatric disorders and historical sections to give the reader access to the classic studies of psychiatry as well as the current evidence Additional topics covered here for the first time include liaison psychiatry psychosexual medicine clinical epidemiology and international and cultural psychiatry Clinical management is given due prominence with extensive accounts of modern drug management cognitive therapy the main psychosocial approaches and current guidelines such as those published by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence An essential text for trainees studying for their MRCPsych this book is also a one stop reference work for established practitioners providing comprehensive coverage of the whole of adult psychiatry

Conversion Hysteria Peter W. Halligan,Anthony S. David,1999 Patients with hysterical conversion present with striking physical symptoms such as weakness sensory disorders or memory loss that suggest a neurological disease but which show no evidence of brain and central nervous system damage Although it is now over one hundred years since Breuer and Freud published their seminal Studies on Hysteria 1895 the story of hysteria remains controversial even its existence as a viable clinical entity has been repeatedly questioned Despite renewed interest over the past decade most publications report little or no empirical research from the cognitive or clinical neurosciences This is surprising given that the explanation of hysteria is still one where the very notions of mind and body and the boundaries and bridges between them are constantly challenged and reconstituted Porter 1993 The rush to explain hysteria in terms of psychodynamics has so far proved elusive Rather than developing further theories of hysteria it is essential to characterise those domains of normal volition and motor and sensory control that may be impaired and from which it is possible to interpret observed symptoms Only then will it be possible to provide a cognitively motivated account of how psychological mechanisms can translate convert into physical symptoms As in other areas of psychiatry it seems beneficial when explaining psychiatric phenomena to consider whether impairment to normal psychological phenomena can be used to construct a rational account of the underlying pathology The aim of this special issue is to bridge the void left by the traditional over reliance on psychodynamic accounts by emphasising putative cognitive and neuropsychological accounts of this puzzling and cotnroversial condition ial to charcterise those domains of normal volition and motor and sensory control that may be impaired and from which it is possible to interpret observed symptoms Only then will it be possible to provide a cognitively motivated account of how psychological mechanisms can translate convert into physical symptoms As in other areas of psychiatry it seems beneficial when explaining psychiatric phenomena to consider whether impairment to normal psychological phenomena can be used to construct a rational account of the underlying pathology The aim of this special issue is to bridge the void left by the traditional over reliance on psychodynamic accounts by emphasising putative cognitive and neuropsychological accounts of this puzzling and cotnroversial condition

Liaison Psychiatry Robert Peveler, Eleanor Feldman, Trevor Friedman, 2000 Liaison psychiatry services have the potential to improve pateint care and streamline medical services but are underdeveloped in many European health systems This book follows on from the 1994 publication Liaison psychiatry defining needs and planning services and is planned as a practical guide to the development of services for a range of specialist settings These include service in obstetrics A E intensive care pain clinics and trauma services In addition there is guidance on the general principles of developing a case of need for services and working with purchasers or commissioners of health care The book will be of particular value to clinicians seeking to develop services in these areas and those seeking evidence on the value of such services Features Practical guide to estimating needs and planning services for aspects of general hospital psychiatry Comprehensive assessment of evidence from the existing literature How best to make a case of needs to purchasers commissioners of health care
