Letters in Search of Love Ronald L. Donaghe, 1998 I wrote most of the essays specifically for this book although some of them have appeared elsewhere All of them are from experiences I had during a period in my life from about 1987 through 1991 which began with what I thought of as my greatest loss in life and ended with what I now consider my greatest gain In a way this period was the darkest of my life I think I was clinically depressed although I never went to a psychologist to find out Yet strangely enough given my chronic depression this was one of the very best times of my life as well This period of years has a definite beginning My lover of fourteen years came to me one night in January of 1987 and said that he wanted to break up because he said he was heterosexual Three months later I ended up in Las Cruces New Mexico living in a motel room with a part time job without a car and with the usual emotional baggage An essay about that experience is not included because I did not want to inflict on the reader the morose self pity I engaged in and at times grimly enjoyed But I do mention this breakup in several of the essays since getting over it is in a sense a thread that ties all the essays in this collection together the emotional fallout from it was partially responsible for the paths I took during that five year period At the beginning of this period I felt old in the gay male queen's sense of being old at thirty eight At the end of this period I was forty three and feeling as if life was just beginning feeling young and stronger than ever In the beginning I was fat and weak with a terrible self concept by the end I could get behind a shovel in my garden and chunk dirt for hours without tiring It was certainly the first time in my adult life when I was proud of my body when I felt wonderful in a T shirt and cutoffs Even as a teenager I'd never felt so confident about my appearance In short it took five years for me to cast off the previous fourteen The struggle with anger and hurt made this period difficult but by the end of it I looked ahead with relish In Part One Letters in Search of Love the essays deal with my search for a new lover In a clinical sense I suppose the reason for this search has some fancy name ordinary people or country western singers however would just say I was on the rebound It probably would have been a disaster had I married another man too soon because I still did not know what my weaknesses or my strengths were Although I did not find a lover through this exchange of letters the process of the search was part of the healing necessary to bury my fourteen year relationship In all I exchanged letters with at least two dozen men over a year long period From those letters I discovered that my pain was not unique Nor my loneliness I also discovered that gay men accommodate adversity and their sexuality in surprisingly different ways Letters from prisoners sometimes amused me sometimes scared the Hell out of me and gave me a safe peak into prison life Other men who wrote were even more self pitying than I was which had a wonderful curative effect on my own self pity The most perplexing maddening and insulting letters came from a widower age around seventy whose wife of a thousand years had died and now he was answering ads from gay men at least I know that he answered my letter which appeared in RFD I say it was maddening because in one of his letters he sent a seven page single spaced type written document stamped CONFIDENTIAL in which he laid down the law by which I would abide if I decided to become his plaything There would be no discussion no objections and no input from me He obviously hadn't bothered to read what I'd written in my letter for RFD or like the plantation slave

Hugo Wolf Susan Youens,2024-01-09 A groundbreaking look at one of the great song composers of the late Romantic period In the virtual cottage industry of works on fin de siècle Vienna Hugo Wolf 1860-1903 has been somewhat neglected perhaps because he was the master of a small genre the late Romantic lied and never truly made his mark in the larger forms that command greater public attention But in the realm of song he is among the greatest inheritors of Schubert and Schumann one who was both a traditionalist and a modernist When the Viennese critic Eduard Hanslick disapprovingly dubbed Wolf the Richard Wagner of the lied he was paying oblique homage to Wolf's genius as a song composer in the most modern manner In this book Susan Youens examines five aspects of Wolf's compositional art each exemplifying a different synthesis of traditionalism and modernity and spanning his entire tragically brief creative life from his first efforts to his lapse into insanity in 1897 She discusses Wolf's youthful imitations of Schumann his genius for comic songs of a kind unlike any of his predecessors his part in the ballad revival of the late nineteenth century Wolf in relation to his contemporaries and his pursuit of operatic fame Youens looks as closely at the poetic texts as she does the music and includes numerous previously unpublished sketches and fragments examples from songs now long out of print and difficult to obtain and citations from Wolf's vivid letters and other sources of the period

Richard Wagner and the Centrality of Love Barry Emslie, 2010 This is a bold book which argues that Wagner's music dramas cannot be understood if treated separately from his essays his life the intellectual and artistic climate of his day and the broader history of Germany Wagner attempts a range of reconciliations that are radical in content and form and appear to succeed partly because he is in well nigh complete command of the aesthetic product not only text and music but also production practice Nonetheless all the reconciliations ultimately break down but in a manner that is illuminating This is not a celebration of the seamless work of art but a radical unpicking of the seemingly seamless Love is the central organising concept of the whole Wagnerian project Love sexual and spiritual egotistical and charitable love of the individual and of the race is the key Wagnerian driving force And therefore so is hate Of course Wagner cannot employ love without its opposite and it is critically significant that his anti semitism is based upon his view that the Jews are loveless The book handles Wagner's anti semitism and the ongoing row about it in a unique way in that it is shown to be aesthetically and intellectually productive for him This leads to a radical reinterpretation of Wagner's music dramas

Ennobling Love C. Stephen Jaeger, 2010-08-03 Richard Duke of Aquitaine son of the King of England remained with Philip the King of France who so honored him for so long that they ate every day at the same table and from the same dish and at night their beds did not separate them And the King of France loved him as his own soul and they loved each other so much that the King of England was absolutely astonished at the vehement love between them and marveled at what it could mean Public avowals of love between men were common from antiquity through the Middle Ages What do these expressions leave to interpretation An extraordinary amount as Stephen Jaeger demonstrates Unlike current efforts to read medieval culture through modern mores Stephen Jaeger contends that love and sex in the Middle Ages relate to each other very differently than in the postmedieval period Love was not only a mode of feeling and desiring or an exclusively private sentiment but a way of behaving and a social ideal It was a form of aristocratic self representation its social function to show forth virtue in lovers to raise their inner worth to increase their honor and enhance their reputation To judge from the number of royal love relationships documented it seems normal rather than exceptional that a king loved his favorites and the courtiers and advisors clerical and lay loved their superiors and each other Jaeger makes an elaborate accessible and certain to be controversial case for the centrality of friendship and love as aristocratic lay clerical and monastic ideals Ennobling Love is a magisterial work a book that charts the social constructions of passion and sexuality in our own times no less than in the Middle Ages The Literary World ,1891 Bulletin of the New York Public Library New York Public Library,1899 Includes its Report 1896 19 The Churchman ,1899 Love Barbara H. Rosenwein,2021-09-21 We make sense of love with fantasies stories that shape feelings that are otherwise too overwhelming incoherent and wayward to be tamed For love is a complex bewildering and ecstatic emotion covering a welter of different feelings and moral judgments Drawing on poetry fiction letters memoirs and art and with the aid of a rich array of illustrations historian Barbara H Rosenwein explores five of our most enduring fantasies of love like minded union transcendent rapture selfless giving obsessive longing and insatiable desire Each has had a long and tangled history with lasting effects on how we in the West think about love today Yet each leads to a different conclusion about what we should strive for in our relationships If only we could peel back the layers of love and discover its true essence But love doesn't work like that it is constructed on the shards of experience story and feeling shared over time intertwined with other fantasies By understanding the history of how we have loved Rosenwein argues we may better navigate our own tumultuous experiences and perhaps write our own scripts Ethics for Apocalyptic Times Daniel Shank Cruz,2023-10-30 Ethics for Apocalyptic Times is about the role literature can play in helping readers cope with our present day crises including the COVID 19 pandemic climate change and the shift toward fascism in global politics Using the lens of Mennonite literature and their own personal experience as a culturally Mennonite queer Latinx person Daniel Shank Cruz investigates the age old question of what literature's role in society should be and argues that when we read literature theapoetically we can glean a relational ethic that teaches us how to act in our difficult times In this book Cruz theorizes theapoetics a feminist reading strategy that reveals the Divine via literature based on lived experiences and extends the concept to show how it is queer decolonial and equally applicable to secular and religious discourse Cruz's analysis focuses on Mennonite literature including Sofia Samatar's short story collection Tender and Miriam Toew's novel Women Talking but also examines a non Mennonite text Samuel R Delany's novel The Mad Man alongside practices of haiku and tarot to show how reading theapoetically is transferable to other literary traditions Weaving together close reading and personal narrative this pathbreaking book makes a significant and original contribution to the field of Mennonite literary studies Cruz's arguments will also be appreciated by literary scholars interested in queer theory and the role of literature in society The Double Edward Cletus Sellner,2013 Drawing upon theology Jungian psychology literature and the history of Christian spirituality this book shows how same sex desire can be
