The Empire State Building Lewis Wickes Hine, 1998 A collection of black and white photographs that document the construction of the Empire State Building completed in 1931 with information about photographer Lewis W Hine Lewis Hine Lewis W. Hine, 1992-10 Empire State Building Lewis Wickes Hine (Photographer, United States), 1994 Men at Work: Lewis Hine's Photographs of the Workers who Constructed the Empire State Building Janine Schildt, 2007-01-20 Seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject American Studies Culture and Applied Geography grade 1.0 Martin Luther University Institut für Anglistik und Amerikanistik course American Photography language English abstract On March 17 1930 a construction marathon began to build the tallest skyscraper on the planet The erecting of a building that was even before its termination determined to become an American landmark was of course an interesting working field for contemporary photographers like Alfred Stieglitz and Lewis Wickes Hine But while the first pictured the gigantic buildings in New York the latter took a different focus in his work In the same way as in his earlier photographs of immigrants entering Ellis Island and children working day and night in American factories Hine focused on the people in his later work In his book Men at Work Photographic Studies of Modern Men and Machines he portrayed the workers constructing the Empire State Building and he looked behind the walls and steel beams to honor the people who made such an architectural wonder possible Other aspects of his late project nevertheless appear contradictory comparing them to his early landmarks of social photography In the Men at Work pictures he praises the modern worker as the centre of a new technologic clearly capitalist era neglecting the social reality of the Great Depression How can Lewis Hine suddenly promote capitalism without showing the other side of the medal the unemployed the socially excluded the poor For what reason did he not continue to portray the under dogs of the system picturing broke farmers in the Mid West or unemployed workers lining up on New York's streets but instead started promotion work for big capitalist like John Jakob Raskob This paper will look at four pictures from Hine's Men at Work series on the construction of the Empire State Building taken during a six month period between 1930 and 1931 It will interpret them in their social context trying to point out the intention of the photographer Hine's portraits will be discussed looking for reasons for the change of focus in his work To conclude the paper the question will be asked if this late series is really a break in his work or not rather a completion of an overall task The photographs discussed in this paper were taken from Lewis Hine's book Men at Work Studies of Modern Men and Machines and the pictorial The Empire State Building edited by Claudine Weber Hof The Grove Encyclopedia of American Art Joan M. the most depressed economic climates in American history in a remote desert canyon where temperatures ranged from single to triple digits In order to visually document the project the Bureau of Reclamation assigned employee Ben Glaha to photograph all aspects of the dam s construction Glaha s photographs were used in press releases periodicals books pamphlets and slide shows to demonstrate that the dam was structurally sound and that government funds were being used wisely Hoover Dam The Photographs of Ben Glaha is the first detailed examination of Glaha s images of the project some of which have never before been published Glaha photographed every aspect of the construction process from details of how the dam was assembled to the overall progress as the dam rose from the bottom of the dry riverbed Glaha not only provided the Bureau with the photographs it required he also employed his own artistic abilities to produce images of the dam that were exhibited in museums and galleries as works of art Because Glaha was able to create a selection of Hoover Dam photographs worthy of exhibition he was unique among government documentary photographers Art historian Barbara Vilander s text places Glaha s efforts within the historical context of western landscape exploration and development and reveals how his particular qualifications led to his selection as the project photographer Vilander then examines the many publications and venues in which the Bureau used Glaha s photographs to create support for the project She also discusses how Glaha was recognized in his own era as an influential artist and teacher and compares his work with that of other contemporary landscape photographers addressing western water management Glaha s Hoover Dam images were widely published although in accordance with Bureau policy he was not usually given personal credit and therefore his name remains largely unknown Vilander s book corrects that oversight by giving Glaha the technical and artistic credit he is due within the context of one of the most ambitious projects in American history
