What a Library Means to a Woman Sheila Liming, 2020-04-28 Examining the personal library and the making of self When writer Edith Wharton died in 1937 without any children her library of more than five thousand volumes was divided and subsequently sold Decades later it was reassembled and returned to The Mount her historic Massachusetts estate What a Library Means to a Woman examines personal libraries as technologies of self creation in modern America focusing on Wharton and her remarkable collection of books Sheila Liming explores the connection between libraries and self making in late nineteenth and early twentieth century American culture from the 1860s to the 1930s She tells the story of Wharton's library in concert with Wharton scholarship and treatises from this era concerning the wider fields of book history material and print culture and the histories and pathologies of collecting Liming's study blends literary and historical analysis while engaging with modern discussions about gender inheritance and hoarding It offers a review of the many meanings of a library collection

while reading one specific collection in light of its owner's literary celebrity What a Library Means to a Woman was born from Liming's ongoing work digitizing the Wharton library collection It ultimately argues for a multifaceted understanding of authorship by linking Wharton's literary persona to her library which was as she saw it the site of her self making

Wounded Hearts Jennifer Travis, 2006-05-18 The literary study of emotion is part of an important revisionary movement among scholars eager to recast emotional politics for the twenty first century Looking beyond the traditional categories of sentiment sensibility and sympathy Jennifer Travis suggests a new approach to reading emotionalism among men She argues that the vocabulary of injury with its evaluations of victimhood and its assessments of harm has deeply influenced the cultural history of emotions From the Civil War to the early twentieth century Travis traces the history of male emotionalism in American discourse She argues that injury became a comfortable vocabulary particularly among white middle class men through which to articulate and to claim a range of emotional wounds The debates about injury that flourished in the cultural arenas of medicine psychology and the law spilled over into the realm of fiction as Travis demonstrates through readings of works by Stephen Crane William Dean Howells Willa Cather Henry James and Edith Wharton Travis concludes by linking this history to twenty first century preoccupations with pain centered politics which she cautions too often focuses only on women and racial minorities
