Plantation Worlds Maan Barua, 2024-07-26 In Plantation Worlds, Maan Barua interrogates debates on planetary transformations through the histories and ecologies of plantations. Drawing on long-term research spanning fifteen years, Barua presents a unique ethnography attentive to the lives of both people and elephants amid tea plantations in the Indian state of Assam. In the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, nearly three million people were brought in to Assam's plantations to work under conditions of indenture. Plantations dramatically altered the region's landscape, plundered resources, and created fraught worlds for elephants and people. Their extractive logics and colonial legacies prevail as durations forging the ambit of infrastructures, labor habitability, and conservation in the present. And yet, as the perspectives of the Adivasi plantation worker community and lifeworlds of elephants show, possibilities for enacting a decolonial imaginary of landscape remain present amid immiseration. From the margins of the Global South, Barua offers an alternative grammar for articulating environmental change. In so doing, he prompts a rethinking of multispecies ecologies and how they are structured by colonialism and race.

Climate Change and Biodiversity Mehtab Singh, R.B. Singh, M.I. Hassan, 2014-05-09 The over-exploitation of important earth resources such as land and water has led to a number of environment-related problems the world over. At the same time, land use change caused by various human activities has led to extinction of many plant and animal habitats and species. In this context, the relevance of biodiversity for human survival is becoming a major international political issue as scientific evidence builds on the global health implications of biodiversity loss. These issues are closely linked with the issue of climate change as many of the health risks due to climate change are associated with rapid degradation of biodiversity. This present work focuses on holistic natural resource-based spatio-temporal planning, development, and management and considers them as essential to save the degraded ecosystem for sustainable resource management. Contributions are compiled in two volumes: 1. Climate Change and Biodiversity and 2. Landscape Ecology and Water Management. Geoinformatics, along with its tools such as remote sensing and geographical information systems (GIS), have been used in assessing the results of various environmental problems both physical and social The volume will be useful for geographers geoscientists hydrologists landscape ecologists environmentalists engineers planners and policy makers On the Brink Vivek Menon,1999 A wonderfully entertaining exploration of the lives of the rarest of animals in India The majestic Bengal tiger sets out for a hunt and the forest erupts animals chittering and barking in alarm A pack of wild dogs whistle to each other even as they rip open the flanks of a still running spotted deer Sarus cranes do their elaborate spellbinding mating dance and pair for life Ancient turtles haul themselves out of the ocean once every three years to lay their eggs in the moonlit sands Sooner than most of us expect these rituals will be part of history On the Brink introduces us to these and seven other animal species of India that are in imminent peril victims of human greed and callousness The author a wildlife biologist who has travelled extensively in the subcontinent tells us stories of their births and deaths their elaborate strategies of survival and their baffling idiosyncrasies And into their stories intrude more than a few humans poachers with a genius for slaughter a handful of harried conservationists and restless tourists who will not be satisfied till a tiger dutifully makes an appearance Well researched and full of anecdotes On the Brink makes the complexities of the animal kingdom and man s interaction with it accessible and compelling
