Morrison-Low,2017-03-02 At the start of the Industrial Revolution it appeared that most scientific instruments were made and sold in London but by the time of the Great Exhibition in 1851 a number of provincial firms had the self confidence to exhibit their products in London to an international audience How had this change come about and why This book looks at the four main and two lesser English centres known for instrument production outside the capital Birmingham Liverpool Manchester and Sheffield along with the older population centres in Bristol and York Making wide use of new sources Dr Morrison Low curator of history of science at the National Museums of Scotland charts the growth of these centres and provides a characterisation of their products New information is provided on aspects of the trade especially marketing techniques sources of materials tools and customer relationships From contemporary evidence she argues that the principal output of the provincial trade with some notable exceptions must have been into the London marketplace anonymously and at the cheaper end of the market She also discusses the structure and organization of the provincial trade and looks at the impact of new technology imported from other closely allied trades By virtue of its approach and subject matter the book considers aspects of economic and business history gender and the family the history of science and technology material culture and patterns of migration It contains a myriad of stories of families and firms of entrepreneurs and customers and of organizations and arms of government In bringing together this wide range of interests Dr Morrison Low enables us to appreciate how central the making selling and distribution of scientific instruments was for the Industrial Revolution

Inventing the Industrial Revolution Christine MacLeod, 2002-05-09 This book examines the development of the English patent system and its relationship with technical change during the period between 1660 and 1800 when the patent system evolved from an instrument of royal patronage into one of commercial competition among the inventors and manufacturers of the Industrial Revolution. It analyses the legal and political framework within which patenting took place and gives an account of the motivations and fortunes of patentees who obtained patents for a variety of purposes beyond the simple protection of an invention. It includes the first in depth attempt to gauge the reliability of the patent statistics as a measure of inventive activity and technical change in the early part of the Industrial Revolution and suggests that the distribution of patents is a better guide to the advance of capitalism than to the centres of inventive activity. It also queries the common assumption that the chief goal of inventors was to save labour and examines contemporary criticism of the patent system in the light of the changing conceptualisation of invention among natural scientists and political economists. Quaker Lloyds in the Industrial Revolution Humphrey Lloyd, 2013-11-05 First Published in 2005 This book is about the Quaker Lloyds in the time of the industrial Revolution from 1660 to 1860. Inspired at first by several finds of unpublished letters it was foreseen as the biography of a family but progressive researches while work on the material was being carried out have made it a family and business history combined. The Industrial Revolution in America Kevin Hillstrom, Laurie Collier Hillstrom, 2007-02-22 This three volume set concludes ABC CLIO's groundbreaking series on the Industrial Revolution as it played out in the United States offering volumes on the communications industry and the agriculture and meatpacking industries plus a concluding overview volume on the causes, courses and interconnections among the industries that brought such dramatic change to our lives. The concluding three volume set in ABC CLIO's landmark Industrial Revolution in America series offers vivid reminders of how this economic renaissance changed virtually every facet of American life. Communications takes readers from the telegraph to the telephone and beyond showing how improvements in communication aided by better transportation helped create a truly national marketplace. Agriculture and Meatpacking details the shift of agriculture from family farms and local trade to mass production and agribusiness sparking the development of a full range of farm machinery and spawning the rise of a new metropolis practically overnight. The concluding Overview Comparison volume looks at the Industrial Revolution as a whole revealing the impact of various industries on each other and gauging the revolution's broader social and political legacy in the United States and around the world. Urban Workers in the Early Industrial Revolution Robert Glen, 2019-08-13 This title first published in 1984 focuses primarily on the early Industrial Revolution c 1780-1820 in the Stockport district. As the Industrial Revolution in England was the first instance of successful industrialisation it can still provide many social and economic lessons and also furnish essential evidence for continuing debate over ideology and theory. Therefore this title will be of interest to students of both history and economics. The Patent System and Inventive Activity During the Industrial Revolution, 1750-1852 H.
