Industrial Progress And Human Economics:

Industrial Progress and Human Economics James Hartness, 2020-09-28 Before the war Vermont and the nation were approaching a serious economic crisis. The war has accentuated the gravity of the situation but has also demonstrated certain human characteristics that can be enlisted to correct our course. We found during the war that we were ready to take heroic action whenever an occasion demanded it that there was a solidarity of purpose of our people. This characteristic must now be invoked. We must meet the conditions that confront us by unity of public opinion and team work. The conditions that confront us do not involve the possibility of immediate invasion of our country by a hostile nation but they carry a burdensome penalty if we fail to take the right action. Happily we are not required to risk our lives or even work harder but we must recognize the plain facts that we are not sharing in the general economic progress of our neighboring states. In war the nation that wins the victory imposes a burden of tax on the conquered nation. In the conquest of peace the victorious nations also impose a burden on the losers. This burden is just as real as the burden imposed by war for in both cases the losers are paying tribute to the winners. This applies to states to communities to families and to men. The situation calls for prompt attention and concerted action by the people of our state and country. In the conquest of peace success comes to those people who produce the greatest value with a given expenditure of energy or in other words to the people who at the end of a day's a year's or a life's work can measure their return in the largest value. Dollars constitute our measures of value for they are our medium of exchange of our products of labor. If to accomplish the same result the man with inferior implements must work harder than the man with the best implements it is very easy to see who has to pay tribute to the other in the market where values are compared and payment made for values. Owing to the advance that has been made both in invention of implements and methods and in the organization of workers there is now a marked difference in the value of the product of a day's work. A study of this situation shows the supreme need of action that will direct our energies as individuals and as a state in a way that will bring the largest value for a day's work. We must choose with care our work our equipment and our methods of combining our efforts. There must be team work within each industrial plant and each plant must be in tune with the whole competing world. As a people we have not lagged behind in fact we have been leaders in many important branches but our enterprise has known no state boundaries and many of our men and women have gone to other states. Hence while as a people we have been leaders as a state we have been lagging behind the more active industrial states. Vermont is very close to the most highly developed industrial center on the face of this globe. These centers through coordination invention and choice of work have been able to produce greater values per man per day. Men with the spirit of industry and a practical knowledge gained by experience in these highly developed centers go out from such centers and build up other industrial centers wherever the best opportunity appears. The nearest places to these centers are the most natural fields in which to start new organizations. But when no cooperating spirit is found near at hand these carriers of industry go till they find better places Many have traveled past Vermont because we were busy in other lines and our money was being sent to other states for investment Many of our own men left the town of Windsor during the last sixty years and from this one town there has been built a number of important industries in other states notably in Massachusetts and Connecticut It is not necessary to assume that the industrial spirit has spread under the guidance of man or just by chance as these men of practical knowledge and enterprise have drifted It may be that the successful new centers were merely a few of thousands of attempts in other places Industrial Progress and Human Economics James Hartness,1921 In general it may be stated that a new organization must start with a superior article to manufacture and the elements of a superior organization Sometimes it is possible by invention alone to win without the aid of the modern plan of specialized organization On the other hand the success may be attained by superior organization without a superior article to manufacture but in general it is better to combine all of the possible beneficial factors in a new organization Industrial Progress and Human Economics James Hartness,2015-04-23 Vermont is very close to the most highly developed industrial center on the face of this globe These centers through coordination invention and choice of work have been able to produce greater values per man per day Men with the spirit of industry and a practical knowledge gained by experience in these highly developed centers go out from such centers and build up other industrial centers wherever the best opportunity appears The nearest places to these centers are the most natural fields in which to start new organizations But when no cooperating spirit is found near at hand these carriers of industry go till they find better places Many have traveled past Vermont because we were busy in other lines and our money was being sent to other states for investment Many of our own men left the town of Windsor during the last sixty years and from this Industrial Development Global Report 1997 United Nations Industrial Development Organization,1997 The UNIDO Industrial Development Global Report provides annual description and analysis of industrial development on both a global and a regional scale The 1997 Report addresses the challenge of diminishing global economic expansion and the falling per capita income of many developing countries by focusing on the long term dynamics of investment and economic growth As its central message it emphasizes the crucial importance investment as a necessary condition for economic growth Economic and Industrial Progress of the Century ... Henry de Beltgens Gibbins,1903 Handbook of Industrial Development Patrizio Bianchi,Sandrine Labory,Philip R. including contributions from Roger Backhouse and Richard Arena Proceedings of the Annual Meeting Governors' Conference,1922 Proceedings of the ... Conference of Governors of the States of the Union ,1922 Institutional Change and Industrial Development in Central and Eastern Europe Anne Lorentzen,Brigitta Widmaier,Mihály Laki,2018-12-21 Published in 1999 this is a collection of recent research results by acknowledged researchers in the field of enterprise transformation and industrial development in Central and Eastern Europe Industrial and Development Economics M. Kapunda,2017-07-19 The aim of this book is to provide comprehensive understanding of industrial economics and its applicability to African countries The book is expected to serve as an intellectual and pedagogical support to teaching It is a vital resource material for both undergraduate and post graduate students The text is also excellent for self study for all people with a keen interest in the discipline because of the unique approach adopted by the author Each chapter is arranged pedagogically starting with learning objectives followed by introductory remarks then content and finally conclusion Numerous relevant examples case studies and review questions are provided The Industrial Study of Economic Progress Hiram Simmons Davis,2016-11-15 This book is a volume in the Penn Press Anniversary Collection To mark its 125th anniversary in 2015 the University of Pennsylvania Press rereleased more than 1 100 titles from Penn Press s distinguished backlist from 1899 1999 that had fallen out of print Spanning an entire century the Anniversary Collection offers peer reviewed scholarship in a wide range of subject areas Trade and Industrial Development in Africa Moyo, Theresa,2015-03-02 This book revisits the perennial challenge that scholars economists and politicians have been grappling with since the 1960s Development in this book has been defined in a context that projects it as a multidimensional and complex process which seeks to enhance the human social economic and cultural welfare of the people This book calls for a rethinking of trade and industry for Africa s development It uses data drawn from national development plans and strategies and trade and industry issues have been prioritized at the continental level in key policy documents On the whole Africa s industry and trade performance have been poor in spite of national regional and continental plans The contributors to this volume propose some alternative strategies and policies which are necessary for trade and industry to grow and to contribute to the well being of Africa s people It calls for a developmental trade and industry policy which fundamentally must be people centred African states should invest time energy and resources to develop policies which will take into consideration African realities The different contributors are aware that Africa has experienced strong economic growth in the recent past but this growth has largely been due to a strong demand for Africa s primary commodity exports It has also been a result of increases in productivity and domestic investment and remittances from Africans living in the Diaspora It is important to note that despite this unprecedented growth performance the impact of trade and industry on development has been limited The book argues that a structural transformation of Africa s economies is inevitable if Africa is to achieve the shift from the dominant paradigm of production and export of primary goods The various contributors to this book agree that there is need to rethink policy and strategy in order to achieve industrial development in Africa There is no unique solution or answer that can fit all situations as African countries are not the same While Africa can draw lessons from other regions which have successfully industrialized this book argues that policies and strategies will have to be adapted to country specific situations and circumstances
