Field, Philip McCabe, Neil Schneiderman, 2013-02-01 The fourth volume based on the annual University of Miami symposia on stress and coping this new addition to the series is the first to focus on developmental and clinical stressors during infancy and childhood While developmental stressors such as early separation and stranger anxiety novelty stress and fear evoked personal distress arise during normal development clinical stressors result from certain conditions that are relatively common in infancy and early childhood such as premature birth and respiratory disease Various therapies are discussed for example relaxation and massage that can alleviate the stress associated with psychiatric conditions in childhood and adolescence including depression and adjustment disorder The result is an integration of diverse research and theory on the psychophysiological developmental and psychosocial aspects of stress and coping in animals and humans by some of the leading researchers in the field Infant Stress and Coping Michael Lewis, John Worobey, 1989 Stress and Coping Across Development Tiffany M. Field, Philip McCabe, Neil Schneiderman, 2013-12-19 This is the second volume based on the annual University of Miami Symposia on Stress and Coping The present volume is focused on some representative stresses and coping mechanisms that occur during different stages of development including infancy childhood and adulthood Accordingly the volume is divided into three sections for those three stages Child and Infant Pain Bernadette Carter, 2013-11-11 This book intends to act as a resource for those caring for children The children I nursed who experienced pain are the stimulus for both my interest in the issue of pain and latterly in writing this book Some of the children I cared for stand out as milestones in terms of provoking thought and in questioning practice James Ralph and Felicity These children were tough and brave and taught me a lot about the human aspect of pain and suffering However as children especially vulner able children in hospital they would not have had to have been as tough or as brave if had been more knowledgeable about practice issues such as distraction imagery massage and so on or had a better understanding of the complexity of pain Nursing should add to a child s life By developing knowledge and skills within pain management and prevention nurses are in a strong position to ensure that they the child and their family are in control of the pain and that the pain is not in control of the child Developing these skills is ultimately rewarding both personally and professionally and nurses should be encouraged to scrutinize their practice carefully and identify areas where improvements could be made Listening carefully to what children and their families say about their pain and in identifying the needs of the individual child is an essential part of holistic and comprehensive nursing care

Subject access A-H*, 1994 Children's Stress and Coping Elaine Shaw Sorensen, 1993-04-09 In spite of the increase in stress coping research little is known about how stress is actually perceived by children in the family setting This is due in part to the real difficulties involved in collecting data on children's subjective experiences In addition what we currently know about children's stress and coping has traditionally derived from adult reporters rather than from the children themselves Filling a gap in the literature this volume explores theoretical and methodological issues related to the study of children and families in general and to stress coping phenomena from the child's perspective in particular The book challenges traditional deference to adult assessment of stress and coping among children by drawing data from both parents and children revealing significant contrasts between the two Through open ended qualitative measures of children's diaries and drawings the book offers a glimpse into the inner world of the child and gives scholarly expression to the fact that children can and readily will articulate needs and perceptions if given an appropriate vehicle The book's well documented chapters discuss traditional approaches to stress and coping implications for current child and family study specific needs related to the study of children within the family and implications for theory and methods Taxonomies of children's stressors coping responses and coping resources are drawn from the data and examined in detail The book concludes with suggestions for future research and clinical practice Providing fascinating insight into children's actual experience of stress and coping this volume lays the groundwork for ongoing research scholarship and therapeutic practice Academicians practitioners and graduate students in family studies child development psychology and nursing will find this book invaluable in shedding light on the often overlooked culture of children Childhood Stress L. Meadow-Orlans,Patricia Elizabeth Spencer,Lynne Sanford Koester,2004-06-17 What is the impact of an infant s diminished hearing on the infant and its parents How does communication develop in cases of diminished hearing How does diminished hearing affect social and cognitive development What types of early interventions can improve communication and development in infants with diminished hearing The World of Deaf Infants presents the results of a 15 year research study that addresses these questions Through their research perhaps the largest long term comparison of deaf and hearing infants Meadow Orlans s team provides a comprehensive and intimate look into the world of deaf infants For a core group of 80 families that includes all four combinations of parent infant hearing status data was collected longitudinally at 9 12 15 and 18 months and mother infant interactions were recorded and observed in both structured and unstructured settings Mothers facial vocal and tactile behaviors during interactions were related to infants temperament and stress mothers linguistic and communication behaviors as well as their overall responsiveness were related to children s language and the effects of support provided to mothers were evaluated and explored The results were dramatic particularly those on infant attachment behaviors and the importance of visual attention to the overall development of deaf infants This comprehensive work provides a foundation on which researchers teachers students and parents can build to improve communication cognitive and social development and to enhance the world of deaf infants Stress, Coping, and Resiliency in Children and Families E. Mavis Hetherington, Elaine A. Blechman, 2014-02-25 Concern with stress and coping has a long history in biomedical psychological and sociological research The inadequacy of simplistic models linking stressful life events and adverse physical and psychological outcomes was pointed out in the early 1980s in a series of seminal papers and books The issues and theoretical models discussed in this work shaped much of the subsequent research on this topic and are reflected in the papers in this volume The shift has been away from identifying associations between risks and outcomes to a focus on factors and processes that contribute to diversity in response to risks Based on the Family Research Consortium s fifth summer institute this volume focuses on stress and adaptability in families and family members The papers explore not only how a variety of stresses influence family functioning but also how family process moderates and mediates the contribution of individual and environmental risk and protective factors to personal adjustment They reveal the complexity of current theoretical models research strategies and analytic approaches to the study of risk resiliency and vulnerability along with the central role risk family process and adaptability play in both normal development and childhood psychopathology
