Inequality Of Human Races:

The inequality of human races Arthur comte de Gobineau,2023-07-10 In The Inequality of Human Races Arthur comte de Gobineau presents a controversial examination of racial hierarchies that posits a deterministic view on human societies. Composed in the mid 19th century the text weaves together a combination of historical analysis ethnography and philosophical discourse reflecting the emerging ideas of racial theories prevalent during that period. Gobineau's literary style is characterized by an eloquent yet polemic tone arguing that the supposed innate inequalities among races are foundational to the evolution of civilizations thereby laying the groundwork for later racist ideologies. Arthur comte de Gobineau a French aristocrat diplomat and writer was profoundly influenced by the socio political turmoil of his time including the upheavals of the French Revolution and rising nationalism. His extensive travels and keen observations on varying cultures enriched his perspective leading him to articulate a vision of racial superiority that would resonate controversially for decades to come. Gobineau's erudition and social critique expose the underlying tensions of his era exposing the dangers of pseudoscientific racial constructs. This book is essential for readers interested in the histories of race sociology and anthropology as it not only provides insight into the ideological foundations of racial thought but also serves as a cautionary tale against reductionist views of human diversity. Scholars and students alike will benefit from engaging with Gobineau's work to understand the complexities and ramifications of racial theories that have shaped modern discourse. GOBINEAU,2018 The Inequality of Human Races Arthur Gobineau,Adrian Collins,2017-08-20 The Inequality of the Human Races Arthur De Gobineau,2017-07-07 This work was the first modern attempt to prove that race is the primary force determining world events and history. Working with the limited scientific data available at the time of writing 1853 Arthur de Gobineau divided humans into three major groupings: white, yellow, and black. He argues that the cause of the downfall of civilizations is always racial mixing and that every civilization has either been directly controlled by what he called Aryans or has had a significant Aryan element mixed in it. He also argues that climate and environment have no bearing on racial characteristics. This book was a cornerstone work for 20th century racial theory and is of immense importance for this reason alone. This new edition has been completely reset and contains all the original text. The Inequality of Human Races Arthur comte de Gobineau,1915 The Inequality of the Human Races Arthur de Gobineau,2016-11-04 This work was the first modern attempt to prove that race is the primary force determining world events and history.
