General Technical Report PNW-GTR, 2007 The American West at Risk Howard G. Wilshire, Jane E. Nielson, Richard W. Hazlett, 2008-06-05 The American West at Risk summarizes the dominant human generated environmental challenges in the 11 contiguous arid western United States America's legendary even mythical frontier When discovered by European explorers and later settlers the west boasted rich soils bountiful fisheries immense dense forests sparkling streams untapped ore deposits and oil bonanzas It now faces depletion of many of these resources and potentially serious threats to its few renewable resources The importance of this story is that preserving lands has a central role for protecting air and water quality and water supplies and all support a healthy living environment The idea that all life on earth is connected in a great chain of being and that all life is connected to the physical earth in many obvious and subtle ways is not some new age fad it is scientifically demonstrable An understanding of earth processes and the significance of their biological connections is critical in shaping societal values so that national land use policies will conserve the earth and avoid the worst impacts of natural processes These connections inevitably lead science into the murkier realms of political controversy and bureaucratic stasis Most of the chapters in The American West at Risk focus on a human land use or activity that depletes resources and degrades environmental integrity of this resource rich but tender and slow to heal western U S The activities include forest clearing for many purposes farming and grazing mining for aggregate metals and other materials energy extraction and use military training and weapons manufacturing and testing road and utility transmission corridors recreation urbanization and disposing of the wastes generated by everything that we do We focus on how our land degrading activities are connected to natural earth processes which act to accelerate and spread the damages we inflict on the land Visit www.theamericanwestatrisk.com to learn more about the book and its authors

Oxidant Air Pollution Impacts in the Montane Forests of Southern California Paul R. Miller, Joe R. McBride, 2012-12-06 Since the 1950s the pines native to the San Bernardino Mountains in Southern California have shown symptoms of decline that have proven to result from exposure to ozone a major plant damaging gas in photochemical oxidant air pollution Because of their proximity to major urban areas the San Bernardino Mountains have served as a natural laboratory for studying effects of oxidant and acidic air pollution on a mixed conifer forest This volume presents a body of research conducted over more than thirty years including an intensive interdisciplinary five year study begun in 1991 Chapters include studies of the relationships of biogeography and climate to the region's air pollution the chemical and physiological mechanisms of ozone injury as well as the impacts of nitrogen containing pollutants and natural stresses on polluted forests The synthesis of such long term studies provides insights into the combined influences of pollutants on ecosystem function in forested regions with Mediterranean type climates
