"King Chameleon and the Animals" and "The Hare and the Tortoise"

Read the two fables and answer the questions that follow.

Passage 1: "King Chameleon and the Animals"

(adapted from William H. Barker's West African Folk-Tales)

- 1 In the olden days, all the animals of the world lived together in a state of anarchy, disorder, and confusion. They had no established authority who could rule over them and pass judgment on their behavior; as a result, animals constantly committed many wicked deeds with impunity.
- 2 At last, the animals convened to discuss this unfortunate state of affairs, and after much deliberation, they decided to choose a king. The great difficulty, however, was how to choose their monarch.
- 3 Lion was the first animal nominated for the honor, but he was vehemently opposed by many because, they said, he was too fierce. Wolf was next proposed—but the sheep and goats adamantly refused to have him because he was their mortal foe, and they knew they would have bad treatment if he were chosen.
- 4 With so much disagreement about who should be the sovereign ruler, it seemed impossible to satisfy everyone's wishes by popular choice. The quarreling animals were united in only one respect: As a group, they were behaving like a dog chasing its own tail. Finally, after much ado, the animals decided to choose their king in another way. They resolved that they would have a competition.
- 5 It so happened that two miles away was a great stool, placed under a very ancient tree that was believed to be the abode of gods. The animals agreed that they would have a great race to this sacred place. The animal who reached and sat down first on the stool would be their chosen king.
- 6 The designated day of the race arrived, and all animals, great and small, prepared to take part in it. Once the signal was given, they started off. The hare—being a very fine runner—speedily outdistanced the others. He reached the stool a full five hundred yards ahead of the next animal. You can imagine, then, his annoyance when, just as he was about to sit down and claim his throne, a voice came from the stool saying, "Take care, Mr. Hare, take care. I am already here."

- 7 This was the voice of the stealthy chameleon. He, being able to camouflage himself by changing his color to suit his surroundings, had seized Mr. Hare's tail just as the race began. Having made his color match the hare's, no one had noticed him. He had held on very tightly, and when the hare turned around to triumphantly take his seat, Chameleon dropped off Mr. Hare's tail and landed on the stool—first.
- 8 The hare realized at once how his chance to become king had been thwarted by Chameleon. Infuriated and indignant, he prepared to sweep the chameleon from the stool. The other animals, however, arrived before he could do so, and they saw the chameleon seated on the stool. According to the agreement they had all made, Chameleon was the king because he had reached the stool first.
- 9 Still, the animals did not like the underhanded way Chameleon had become king, and they were dissatisfied with the result. So as soon as the coronation was done, they scattered in every direction and left King Chameleon quite alone, seated on his ill-gotten throne.
- 10 Chameleon eventually realized the error of his ways; he was so ashamed that he went and made his home atop a very high tree on a mountain. In the dead of night, you may yet hear him calling his imagined attendants and loyal subjects to come and keep him company. But no one pays him any heed. He lives alone, a king with no one to command.
