

A RELIC OF "KING BILLY."

LEARMONTH, Tuesday.

The breastplate of "King Billy," the last of his tribe, whose remains were interred in the Ballarat Cemetery on Sunday, is now in the possession of Constable Perkins, of this township, it having been discovered in "Billy's" swag at Burrumbeet. The plate bears the following inscription:—"Thomas Jerusalem, Chief of Boangor and Langaree," the engraving being apparently executed by a professional. It appears the original owner of the breastplate, Thomas Jerusalem, was a brother-in-law of "Billy's," and on the death of the former the plate was presented to "Billy" by his sister. "Billy's" faithful dog cannot be induced to leave his deceased master's coat, which is in the possession of Mr. Smith, of Burrumbeet.

Bramwell Withers offers a meticulous chronicle of Ballarat tracing its evolution from early pastoral beginnings to a vibrant community. The book is characterized by an engaging narrative style weaving together personal anecdotes, historical records, and socio-political commentary, thereby painting a multifaceted picture of the town's development. Positioned within the broader context of Australian colonial history, Withers situates Ballarat's story amid the larger themes of migration, gold mining, and community formation, making it not just a local history but also an insightful reflection on national identity during the 19th century. Withers, deeply rooted in the Ballarat community, was a witness to its growth firsthand. His experiences as a local journalist and historian equipped him with the unique perspective necessary to document the region's multifarious phases. His personal connections and commitment to preserving Ballarat's legacy reflect both a sense of nostalgia and a scholarly dedication to historical accuracy, ensuring the story of this pivotal town is not forgotten. This book is invaluable for historians, students, and anyone interested in the Australian experience during the gold rush era. Withers' comprehensive research and intimate understanding of Ballarat's culture and heritage make this work a significant contribution to Australian historiography, ensuring it appeals to a wide audience and stimulates further interest in this remarkable locale.

Hunters and Collectors Tom Griffiths, 1996-04. Hunters and Collectors is about historical consciousness and environmental sensibilities in European Australia from the mid-nineteenth century to the present. It is in part a collective biography of amateur antiquarians, archaeologists, naturalists, journalists, and historians—people who shaped the Australian historical imagination. Dr Griffiths illuminates the way these avid collectors and investigators of the Australian land and of its indigenous inhabitants contributed a sense of identity at colony-wide and eventually nationwide level. He also considers the rise of professional history, anthropology, and archaeology in the universities, which ignored the efforts of the amateurs. Griffiths shows how the seemingly trivial activities of these hunters and collectors feed into the political and environmental debates of the 1990s. This book is outstanding in its originality, interpretative insight, and literary flair. Stories of the Orient Various, 2010-08-01. In the mood for some swashbuckling tales of explorers' adventures in the exotic Orient, this varied collection is sure to fit the bill. A must-read for fans of fiction from the colonial period, these stories offer a tantalizing glimpse into the tumultuous era when the West and East first intersected. Excerpt: he looked appealingly at Bordon, Hercules, and Omphale, said Bordon and Raymond, who after all had a sense of the absurd, gave a kind of snigger which made monsieur look at his youngest daughter sternly. Yes, said he, it is Hercules and Omphale, and it is I think very beautiful indeed. What do you think, my dears? And they chorused approbation of Bordon's work, studying it very carefully without one real notion as to where it succeeded and where it failed. But Bordon could not give his mind to the matter at all. Raymond had grown very serious and was pantomiming from his shelf in a way that made the sculptor think he would lose his balance and come with a crash upon the floor He held up his three fingers to signify the approaching hour when his absence from the office would be his ruin He tore his hair to signify his utter misery at the prospect He pointed to the door for Bordon to get rid of his visitors who were so thoroughly enjoying themselves He clasped his hands turned up his palms moved his lips but Bordon made no sign Raymond would have to suffer in his turn as he had suffered He turned away Now it seems to me Monsieur Bordon said the tradesman with all the condescension of the moneyed man that this is a noble work full doubtless of delicacy and charming sentiment but it occurs to me that this figure is nude Yes it is nude undoubtedly replied Bordon Do you think it need necessarily be so It is for you to decide but I think seeing I propose this work of yours shall be seen by every one that if it were let us say less nude it might be an advantage Bordon for a moment forgot Raymond
