Old World Hero Stories Eva March Tappan,2020-09-28 A LONG long time ago perhaps three thousand years or more there was a man named Ho mer No one knows much about him but there are legends that he was born on the island of Chi os and that he was blind He wandered about the land homeless but welcome wherever he chose to go because he was a poet He once described how a blind poet was treated at a great banquet and probably that is the way in which people treated him He said that when the feast was ready a page was sent to lead in the honored guest A silver studded chair was brought forward for him and set against a pillar On the pillar the page hung his harp so near him that he could touch it if he wished A little table was placed before him and on it was put a tray spread with food and wine When the feasting was at an end he sang a glorious song of the mighty deeds of men The Greeks liked to hear stories just as well as the people of to day and they shouted with delight Then they all went out to the race course the page leading the blind singer carefully along the way There were races and wrestling matches and boxing and throwing of the discus After this the poet took his harp and stepped to the centre of the circle The young men gathered around him eagerly and he chanted a story of A res the war god and Aph ro di te goddess of beauty and love Homer composed two great poems One is the Il i ad which takes its name from Il i um or Troy a town in Asia Minor For ten long years the Greeks tried to capture Ilium They had good reason for waging war against the Tro jans for Par is son of the king of Troy had stolen away the Grecian Helen the most beautiful woman in the world She was the wife of a Greek prince named Men e la us and the other princes of Greece joined him in attacking Troy They took some smaller places round about and divided the booty as the custom was In the tenth year of the war A chil les and Ag a mem non two of the greatest of the princes quarreled about one of these divisions and here the Iliad begins Achilles was so angry that he took his followers the Myr mi dons left the camp and declared that he would have nothing more to do with the war he would return to Greece Now the Greeks were in trouble indeed for Achilles was their most valiant leader and his men were exceedingly brave soldiers They sent his friend Pa tro clus to beg him to come back Achilles would not yield even to him but he finally agreed to allow his followers to return and also to lend his armor and equipments to Patroclus
