Kip Viscusi,2020-10-06 How society s undervaluing of life puts all of us at risk and the groundbreaking economic measure that can fix it Like it or not sometimes we need to put a monetary value on people s lives In the past government agencies used the financial cost of death to monetize the mortality risks of regulatory policies but this method vastly undervalued life Pricing Lives tells the story of how the government came to adopt an altogether different approach the value of a statistical life or VSL and persuasively shows how its more widespread use could create a safer and more equitable society for everyone In the 1980s W Kip Viscusi used the method to demonstrate that the benefits of requiring businesses to label hazardous chemicals immensely outweighed the costs VSL is the risk reward trade off that people make about their health when considering risky job choices With it Viscusi calculated how much more money workers would demand to take on hazardous jobs boosting calculated benefits by an order of magnitude His current estimate of the value of a statistical life is 10 million In this book Viscusi provides a comprehensive look at all aspects of economic and policy efforts to price lives including controversial topics such as whether older people s lives are worth less and richer people s lives are worth more He explains why corporations need to abandon the misguided cost of death approach how the courts can profit from increased application of VSL in assessing liability and setting damages and how other countries consistently undervalue risks to life Pricing Lives proposes sensible economic guideposts to foster more protective policies and greater levels of safety in the United States and throughout the world Human Capital Ismail Abdel-Hamid

A Theory of Housing Provision under Capitalism Mike Berry, 2023-04-20 This book provides the first coherent Marxist analysis of the central importance of housing in the social reproduction of capitalism as a whole Rather than consigning housing to the sidelines Berry argues that the circulation of capital and revenues through housing and the built environment helps explain how the capital labour relation constrains housing outcomes while also being reproduced on an extended scale He shows how housing is provided by the intervention of building property and interest bearing capital fractions how the land question can be explained by a theory of urban land rent drawing on Marx's categories of differential and monopoly rent how housing is vital to the extended reproduction of labour power while also creating a semi separate sphere of home in which gender and demographic factors overlay and accentuate social class position The modes impact and drivers of state intervention in housing provision are seen to modify the patterns and pace of capital circulation through housing and the urban built environment with implications for shifts in class fragmentation and power relations
