history in Canada and tell a human story of two Canadian men of letters one in his prime the other at the end of his life Our Intellectual Strength and Weakness John George Bourinot, Thomas Guthrie Marguis, 1973-12-15 These three works displaying marked differences in purpose tone and effect are all classics of Canadian literary and cultural criticism John George Bourinot was a man of letters an Imperialist and a biculturalist who was confident of his knowledge of the Canadian identity and felt it to be his public mission to align reality with his own personal vision Writing in 1893 to the lite represented by the members of the Royal Society he described his work as a monograph on the intellectual development of the Dominion describing the progress of culture in a country still struggling with the difficulties of the material development of half a continent Two decades later Thomas Guthrie Marquis and Camille Roy wrote what were in contrast specialized assignments contributions to the compendium history Canada and Its Provinces 1913 Addressing a far larger audience and treating a vastly enlarged body of Canadian literature their work comes much closer to contemporary scholarship with greater clarity organization and sheer bulk of information but with the loss of some of the charm and assurance of Bourinot's wide sweep In further contrast to Bourinot's determined biculturalism and will to unity Roy and Marquis essays display vivid differences in the emotional allegiances and convictions of the founding cultures Marguis starts by asking the guestion Has Canada a voice of her own in literature distinct from that of England Roy treats French Canadian literature in its Roman Catholic contexts Canadian Writers and Their Works Robert Lecker, Jack David, Ellen Quigley, 1983
