Land Resource Management in Machakos District, Kenya, 1930-1990 John English, Mary Tiffen, Michael Mortimore, 1994 World Bank Environment Paper 5 This paper reviews land management practices and agricultural innovation in this semi arid region since the 1930s when it was feared that the region would quickly lose its capacity to support its inhabitants and the The Global Environmental Benefits of Land Degradation Control on Agricultural Land Stefano Pagiola, 1999-01-01

This book focuses on the global effects of land degradation but emphasizes other important levels of land degradation at the field level it may result in reduced productivity at the national level it may cause flooding and sedimentation and at the global level it can contribute to climate changes damaging bio diversity and international waters The effects on climate changes are explored and the report questions the extent to which land degradation on agricultural land affects climate change Does it increase emissions of greenhouse gases Does it affect land s capacity to serve as a carbon sink Can appropriate management enhance both land s productivity and its capacity to store carbon The carbon cycle in soils is analyzed indicating land degradation is likely to reduce the ability of soils to serve as carbon sink and release stored carbon into the atmosphere and bio diversity effects are likely to be adverse Global benefits of land degradation control include afforestation to allow increased carbon sequestration and provide adequate bio diversity habitats and community based wildlife management can provide alternatives to some marginal areas Although integrating global dimensions into land degradation control projects may reverse the field level or national problems it is causing difficulties and constraints will likely contribute to the failure of these projects

Rethinking Sustainability Jonathan Mark Harris, 2009-11-12 Bringing together the thoughts of economists political scientists anthropologists philosophers and agricultural policy professionals this volume focuses on the issues of sustainability in development Examining such topics as international trade political power gender roles legal institutions and agricultural research the contributors focus on the missing links in theory and practice that have been barriers to the achievement of truly sustainable development Any theory of sustainable development must take into account economic social and environmental dimensions Until recently the question What is development was often answered predominantly from the economist s perspective with high priority being assigned to expansion of economic output Social political institutional and ethical aspects have often been neglected But now that sustainable development has become a broadly accepted concept it is impossible to maintain a narrowly economic view of development For this reason the varied perspectives offered by the contributors to this volume are crucial to understanding the process of development as it relates to environmental sustainability and human well being The selection of articles is meant to be stimulating and provocative rather than comprehensive They are roughly divided between those dealing with broad theoretical issues concerning the economic political and social aspects of development Part I and those presenting more applied analysis Part II The common thread is a concern for examining which factors contribute to making development socially just and environmentally sound Rethinking Sustainability will be of interest to economists and social scientists development professionals and instructors seeking to offer their students a broad perspective on development issues Jonathan Harris is Senior Research Associate Global Development and Environment Institute at Tufts University as well as Adjunct Associate Professor of International Economics at Tufts University Fletcher School of Law

Singh,1997 Cowpea taxonomy genetics and breeding physiology and agronomy diseases and parasitic weeds insect pests postharvest technology and utilization Biotechnological applications Food Security for Rural Africa Terry Leahy,2018-09-03 At least fifty years of projects aimed at the rural poor in Africa have had very little impact Up to half of the children of these countries are still suffering from stunting and malnutrition Soil degradation and poor crop yields are ubiquitous Projects are almost always aimed at helping local people to solve their problems by growing for the market In some countries projects link poor villagers into cooperatives to produce a commercial output In other countries projects target more competent entrepreneurial villagers Almost all these projects fail after several years Even those that are successful make few inroads into the problems While the slogan feeding the farmers first comes from the Philippines it is particularly applicable to much of Africa where household food security can come from household production This book explains how projects can be designed that increase food security through subsistence production Focusing on particular people and projects it gives a sociological analysis of why this is so difficult to manage This book challenges the models promoted by academics in the field of development studies and argues against the strategies adopted by most donor organizations and government bodies It explains why commercial projects have been so ubiquitous even
