Social Security Bulletin ,1969 How Big (Small?) are Fiscal Multipliers? Ethan Ilzetzki,Mr.Enrique G.

Mendoza, Mr. Carlos A. Végh Gramont, 2011-03-01 We contribute to the intense debate on the real effects of fiscal stimuli by showing that the impact of government expenditure shocks depends crucially on key country characteristics such as the level of development exchange rate regime openness to trade and public indebtedness Based on a novel quarterly dataset of government expenditure in 44 countries we find that i the output effect of an increase in government consumption is larger in industrial than in developing countries ii the fiscal multiplier is relatively large in economies operating under predetermined exchange rate but zero in economies operating under flexible exchange rates iii fiscal multipliers in open economies are lower than in closed economies and iv fiscal multipliers in high debt countries are also zero Regreening the Bare Hills David Lamb, 2010-10-14 In Regreening the Bare Hills Tropical Forest Restoration in the Asia Pacific Region David Lamb explores how reforestation might be carried out both to conserve biological diversity and to improve the livelihoods of the rural poor While both issues have attracted considerable attention in recent years this book takes a significant step by integrating ecological and silvicultural knowledge within the context of the social and economic issues that can determine the success or failure of tropical forest landscape restoration Describing new approaches to the reforestation of degraded lands in the Asia Pacific tropics the book reviews current approaches to reforestation throughout the region paying particular attention to those which incorporate native species including in multi species plantations It presents case studies from across the Asia Pacific region and discusses how the silvicultural methods needed to manage these new plantations will differ from conventional methods It also explores how reforestation might be made more attractive to smallholders and how trade offs between production and conservation are most easily made at a landscape scale The book concludes with a discussion of how future forest restoration may be affected by some current ecological and socio economic trends now underway The book represents a valuable resource for reforestation managers and policy makers wishing to promote these new silvicultural approaches as well as for conservationists development experts and researchers with an interest in forest restoration Combining a theoretical research perspective with practical aspects of restoration the book will be equally valuable to practitioners and academics while the lessons drawn from these discussions will have relevance elsewhere throughout the tropics Farmline, 1981 Politics of the Administrative Process Donald F. Development Scott Cummings, 1988-04-07 Written in a non technical narrative style this book is an invaluable resource for anyone concerned with current trends in urban development During the Reagan era responsibility for urban planning and development was transferred from government to private business This private sector hegemony over urban development differs markedly from the liberal policy initiatives of the 1960s and 1970s Through a series of case studies this book examines these shifting trends and shows that private sector efforts to revitalize America s central cities have not been uniformly successful The contributors who are among America s leading social scientists utilize neo Marxist urban theory to explain the conditions under which private initiative enhances or erodes downtown redevelopment
