

The book cover features a dramatic, high-contrast illustration. A large, dark, gnarled tree branch extends from the left side across the upper half of the cover. In the center, a bright, glowing sun or moon is partially obscured by dark, swirling clouds. A small, dark silhouette of a bird is captured in flight, positioned directly in front of the glowing orb. The background transitions from a deep red at the top to a dark, almost black, at the bottom where the text is located.

In the twenty first century a developmental phase of life is emerging as significant and distinct capturing our interest engaging our curiosity and expanding our understanding of human potential and development Demographers talk about this new chapter in life as characterized by people between fifty and seventy five who are considered neither young nor old In our third chapters we are beginning to redefine our views about the casualties and opportunities of aging we are challenging cultural definitions of strength maturity power and sexiness This is a chapter in life when the traditional norms rules and rituals of our careers seem less encompassing and restrictive when many women and men seem to be embracing new challenges and searching for greater meaning in life In The Third Chapter the renowned sociologist Dr Sara Lawrence Lightfoot offers a strong counterpoint to the murky ambivalence that shrouds our clear view of people in their third chapters She challenges the still prevailing and anachronistic images of aging by documenting and revealing the ways in which the years between fifty and seventy five may in fact be the most transformative and generative time in our lives tracing the ways in which wisdom experience and new learning inspire individual growth and cultural transformation The women and men whose voices fill the pages of The Third Chapter tell passionate and poignant stories of risk and vulnerability failure and resilience challenge and mastery experimentation and improvisation and insight and new learning
