How Many Can Be Joint Supporting Joint Duty Assignments:

The Goldwater-Nichols Act and the Joint Duty Promotion Requirement Michael C. Veneri, 2004 Under the Goldwater Nichols Act of 1986 several changes were instituted by Congress in an effort to reform the U S military Title IV Joint Officer Management of the Act was aimed at reforming the officer development of the services in an effort to eliminate the parochial service dispositions that had previously plagued U S military efforts Title IV instituted policies to provide officers with joint education and joint experience in an effort to develop officers with a multi service or joint perspective In an effort to provide senior officers with joint experience all officers promoted to the rank of brigadier general or rear admiral 07 must have completed a joint duty assignment prior to promotion This dissertation looks specifically at the joint duty promotion requirement instituted under Title IV in an effort to analyze the U S military s ability to implement a congressional mandate The implementation of the joint duty assignment as a promotion requirement has been a source of concern for both the services and congressional policymakers

How Many Can Be Joint? Supporting Joint Duty Assignments, 1996 The Goldwater Nichols Department of Defense DoD Reorganization Act of 1986 directed a broad range of organizational and functional changes to improve the ability of the military services to carry out successful joint military operations However from the act s initial implementation the defense agencies and the services have raised numerous concerns about its provisions and procedures Congress recognized these concerns and tasked DoD to revisit the implementation of the Goldwater Nichols legislation The conferees of the 1993 National Defense Authorization Act reviewed the procedures both statutory and regulatory for designating a position as a joint duty assignment and concluded that the time has come to reconsider the joint duty assignment list particularly with respect to Defense Agencies In response to a request by the Director of Manpower and Personnel of the Joint Staff JS J 1 RAND examined the joint officer management that forms the basis of the response to the congressional directives To respond to Congress effectively the research approached the issue of joint officer management from both the demand and supply sides The goal of the demand side research was to recommend a procedure for measuring the joint content of a position the goal of the supply side research was to determine how many of the positions with joint content the services could support This report describes the results of the supply side analysis

Identifying and Supporting Joint Duty Assignments John Frederic Schank, Harry Thie, Margaret C. Harrell, 1996 The Goldwater Nichols Reorganization Act of 1986 directed the Department of Defense to make a broad range of organizational and functional changes to better enable the military services to carry out successful joint operations However concerns raised on numerous fronts prompted Congress to reevaluate the original implementation of the legislation RAND s research has approached the concerns from both the demand and supply sides
