Alexander and Dindimus Omar Khalaf,2017 Alexander and Dindimus is an anonymous alliterative poem which tells the fictitious epistolary exchange between Alexander the Great and Dindimus king of the Bragmans It is acknowledged to be one of the earliest poems belonging to the Alliterative Revival Derived from the Historia de Preliis Alexandri Magni its sole witness is extant in Oxford Bodleian Library MS Bodley 264 a lavishly illustrated miscellany containing French texts dealing with the Alexander legend The manuscript is one of the clearest examples of multilingual codices that were produced and circulated in England in the late Middle Ages It is probable that the compiler conceived Alexander and Dindimus as a moral and edifying complement to the French chivalric romances present in the first part of the manuscript The introduction includes an up to date study of the text with a focus on its codicological linguistic and metrical features In particular it explores relationships between the text of Alexander and Dindimus and the nine accompanying illustrations which are reproduced in the edited text It includes also an analysis of the Latin source for the text The edition is supported by a commentary and glossary A Dictionary of the English Language Samuel Johnson,2008-08-21 Compact reproduction of the 1755 first edition A dictionary of the English language in which the words are deduced from their originals and illustrated in their different significations by examples from the best writers to which are prefixed a history of the language and an English grammar The Encyclopedia of Science Fiction Peter Nicholls,1979 Tweede t'samen-spraec, tusschen
