Historic Preservation Collective Memory Historical Identity:

Historic Preservation Diane L. Barthel, 1996 Historic preservation is a cultural movement gaining momentum and adherents throughout Europe and the United States How do we decide what to preserve and how to preserve Who benefits from the efforts of preservationists curators developers and other symbolic bankers to safeguard an increasing variety of structures for future generations Diane Barthel raises these and other questions in this important new book Taking a comparative approach Barthel finds that preservation in Britain has largely been an elite enterprise aimed at preserving traditional values In the United States by contrast the pattern is much more dynamic and democratic though also more permeated by commercialism Is preservation becoming another means of consuming history like media representations or historic shopping outlets Or does it have a special significance as a very tangible means of getting in touch with our collective and individual pasts These and other issues including war and remembrance agrarian and industrial preservation and religious preservation in a secular society demonstrate the significance of what Barthel calls the Preservation Project and why we all have a stake in how our history is reconstructed and interpreted Historic Preservation Diane L.

Barthel-Bouchier, 1996 Collective Memory and European Identity Willfried Spohn, 2016-12-05 Is it possible to create a collective European identity In this volume leading scholars assess the link between collective identity construction in Europe and the multiple memory discourses that intervene in this construction process The authors believe that the exposure of national collective memories to an enlarging communicative space within Europe affects the ways in which national memories are framed Through this perspective several case studies of East and West European memory discourses are presented The first part of the volume elaborates how collective memory can be identified in the new Europe The second part presents case studies on national memories and related collective identities in respect of European integration and its extension to the East This timely work is the first to investigate collective identity construction on a pan European scale and will be of interest to academics and postgraduate students of political sociology and European studies Structures of Memory Jennifer A. Jordan, 2006 Structures of Memory turns to the landscape of contemporary Berlin particularly places marked by the presence of the Nazi regime in order to understand how some places of great cruelty or great heroism are forgotten by all but eyewitnesses while others become the site of public ceremonies museums or commemorative monuments
