A learning disability is a mental condition that affects a person's normal range of abilities. The condition affects the person's ability to do things in everyday life.

Did you know that 90% of children are not made aware of people with the same disability and how they can help them?

There are four broad categories of disability:

- Intellectual/learning disability
- Physical disability
- Sensory impairment
- Mental health

Each of these disabilities affects children in different ways:

In the intellectual/learning disability, someone has an issue with their ability to learn. This can affect their ability to communicate and understand what is being said to them and what they are doing.

In physical disability, someone has a physical condition that affects their ability to do things. This can affect their ability to move and do things that most people can do.

What is a learning disability?

Learning disabilities are often lifelong and affect someone's ability to learn to do things. People with learning disabilities often have trouble reading, writing, and understanding what is being said to them. This can affect their ability to do things that most people can do.

The most common disabilities are:

- Autism
- Down's Syndrome
- Cerebral Palsy
- Epilepsy
- Mental Health Issues
- Physical Disabilities
- Sensory Impairments
- Intellectual Disabilities
