

The JOLLY BOOK of BOXCRAFT

By PATTEN BEARD

Cardboard boxes are to be found everywhere. Big boxes, little boxes, middle-sized boxes, round, square, deep, shallow—are sent to us daily by the tradesmen—and most of them are thrown away.

Miss Beard was the first to discover their wonderful possibilities. Following her simply worded instructions, any child who is able to handle scissors can make any number of fascinating toys and games from discarded boxes with the aid of paste and crayons. But the triumph of Boxcraft is Boxville, the model town, which, when complete, contains everything that a prosperous and progressive town should have, from the little white cottage to the sumptuous Hotel Band-box. The church, school, residences, stores, railroad stations and bridges are all models of their kind.

The charm of it is that it is so easy. There are no complicated patterns to be cut out, for the boxes form a ready-made ground work for most of the buildings. Best of all it is educational in a way that Montessori would thoroughly approve, for it teaches the children observation, self-reliance and resourcefulness through the joy of doing.
