Osbeck) (Band 12)* Lara Etzbach, 2022-01-10. Fruits are an important part of a balanced diet because of their high content in vitamins, minerals, dietary fiber, and bioactive compounds. Since the shelf life of fruits is limited due to microbiological, biochemical, and enzymatic reactions, processing and preservation are necessary to ensure food safety and year-round availability. The present thesis aimed to investigate the effects of commonly used processing methods for fruit juice and puree production, such as thermal pasteurization, alternative pasteurization, HPP, PEF, ultrasonication, and spray drying, on the stability of carotenoids in goldenberry (Physalis peruviana L.) and orange (Citrus sinensis L.) Osbeck. This thesis reveals the potential of ultrasonication as a homogenization technology that could be applied in the fruit juice industry in combination with pasteurization for the improved production of fruit juices and purees rich in potentially bioavailable carotenoids. Moreover, in comparison to commonly used carrier agents for spray drying, cellobiose showed a high potential for the application as innovative carrier material to obtain fruit juice powders with good physicochemical properties while preserving valuable constituents such as carotenoids. Nutritional Composition of Fruit Cultivars Monique Simmonds, Victor R. Preedy, 2015-10-16. Nutritional Composition of Fruit Cultivars provides readers with the latest information on the health-related properties of foods, making the documentation of the nutritive value of historical cultivars especially urgent, especially before they are lost and cannot be effectively compared to modern cultivars. Because there is considerable diversity and a substantial body of the compositional studies directed towards commercial varieties, this information is useful for identifying traits and features that may be transposed from one variety to another. In addition, compositional and sensory features may also be used for commercialization and to characterize adulteration. Detailed characterization of cultivars can be used to identify super foods.

Alternatively unmasked historical cultivars may be the focus of reinvigorated commercial practices Each chapter in this book has sections on the botanical aspects the composition of traditional or ancient cultivars the composition of modern cultivars a focus on areas of research the specialty of the communicating author of each chapter and summary points Presents the botanical aspects and composition of both traditional and modern plants including in depth insight into current research and overall summary points for each fruit for consistent comparison and ease of reference Provides important information in the consideration of preservation transference or re introduction of historical traditional cultivars into current crop science Provides details on compositional and sensory parameters from aroma and taste to micro and macronutrients Includes data on nutraceuticals and novel components that have proven to impact on or be important in food quality storage processing storage and marketing
