without access to regional news compounded the distance between media and publics and further eroded civic engagement. Despite the looming crisis in journalism, a research practice gap plagues the news industry. This book argues that an underappreciated factor in the news crisis is a potentially symbiotic relationship between journalism studies and the industry that it researches. As this book contends, scholars must think about their work in a public context and journalists too need to listen to media scholars and take the research that they do seriously. Including contributions from journalists and academics, Journalism Research That Matters offers journalists a guide on what they need to know and journalism scholars a call to action for what kind of research they can do to best help the news industry reckon with disruption. The book looks at new research developments surrounding audience behavior, social networks, and journalism business models; the challenges that scholars face in making their research available to the public and to journalists; the financial survival of quality news and information; and blind spots in the way that researchers and journalists do their work, especially around race, diversity, and inequality. A final section includes contributions from journalists about how researchers can better engage on the ground with newsrooms and media professionals.

Within a global context, the sixth edition also explores American radio by providing an overview of the rules, regulations, and purpose of the Federal Communications Commission. The sixth edition includes updated material on new digital recording methods and the development of outside broadcast techniques including smartphone use. The use of social media as news sources and an expansion of the station's presence, global government regulation, and journalistic codes of practice. Comprehensive advice on interviewing, phone-ins, news, radio drama, music, and scheduling. Journalism as Practice Sandra Borden, 2013-10-28 Technological innovation and conglomeration in communication industries has been accelerating the commodification of the news into just another product. The emphasis on the bottom line has resulted in newsroom budget cuts and other business strategies that seriously endanger good journalism. Meanwhile, the growing influence of the Internet and partisan commentary has led even journalists themselves to question their role. In Journalism as Practice, Sandra L. Borden shows that applying philosopher Alasdair MacIntyre's ideas of a practice to journalism can help us to understand what is at stake for society and for those in the newsrooms who have made journalism their vocation. She argues that developing and promoting the kind of robust group identity implied by the idea of a practice can help journalism better withstand the moral challenges posed by commodification. Throughout the book, it examines key U.S. journalism ethics cases.

since 2000 Some of these cases such as Dan Rather s Memogate scandal are explored in detail in Practically Speaking sections that discuss relevant cases at length This book is essential reading for students and practicing journalists interested in preserving the ethical role of journalism in promoting the public good

Blogger or Journalist? Evaluating What Is the Press in the Digital Age Tracy Brown,2012-12-15 From the Introduction The days of relying on the newspaper delivery boy to deliver information to households are long over The Internet and mobile phone technologies have changed how information is gathered and delivered in ways that can t be overstated They have allowed people worldwide to gather share and access news as it s happening The Internet and sites such as Facebook and YouTube have made it possible for anyone to reach a broad global audience and for anyone with a computer to be a news provider There is an enormous amount of content available online on just about any topic Viewers and readers must weed through this information to find sources that they trust and that they can rely on in the same way that people read their daily paper or watch their favorite television news broadcast The difference is the people who write for newspapers or television news are journalists people whose job it is to research and deliver news to the public When you go online you find content from lots of different people many of whom are not actual journalists but interested citizens who want to share information with the public much like journalists do These non journalists include writers of blogs and producers of independent news stories people who are not working for official media outlets like established news channels or publications Here we will look at the differences between journalists and this new breed of news providers We will discuss what professional standards journalists must follow that bloggers are not bound to as well as what laws protect journalists but do not offer the same protection for non journalists Also discussed will be the roles different types of news providers serve in society and how our definition of journalism is changing The purpose is to help consumers of online news better understand where the news they read is coming from what news they can trust how to tell the difference between fact and opinion and how to put together everything they read to form their own ideas about current events and then perhaps even to share their ideas in their own online publications or blogs
