David Gregory,2010-04-13 In The Late Victorian Folksong Revival The Persistence of English Melody 1878 1903 E David Gregory provides a reliable and comprehensive history of the birth and early development of the first English folksong revival Continuing where Victorian Songhunters his first book left off Gregory systematically explores what the Late Victorian folksong collectors discovered in the field and what they published for posterity identifying differences between the songs noted from oral tradition and those published in print In doing so he determines the extent to which the collectors distorted what they found when publishing the results of their research in an era when some folksong

texts were deemed unsuitable for polite ears The book provides a reliable overall survey of the birth of a movement tracing the genesis and development of the first English folksong revival It discusses the work of more than a dozen song collectors focusing in particular on three key figures the pioneer folklorist in the English west country Reverend Sabine Baring Gould Frank Kidson who greatly increased the known corpus of Yorkshire song and Lucy Broadwood who collected mainly in the counties of Sussex and Surrey and with Kidson and others was instrumental in founding the Folk Song Society in the late 1890s The book includes copious examples of the song tunes and texts collected including transcriptions of nearly 300 traditional ballads broadside ballads folk lyrics occupational songs carols shanties and national songs demonstrating the abundance and high quality of the songs recovered by these early collectors Talking for Britain Simon Elmes, 2005 Do you say gooseberries or goosegogs Do you wear daps or plimsolls at the gym And do you take your tranklements with you when you go to work From Geordie to Scouse and Estuary English Britain has a rich dialect tradition and in 2005 for the first time in some fifty years a major nationwide survey is being conducted to see how we talk what words we use and how accents and vocabulary vary from region to region Radio 4 in conjunction with BBC local radio stations will be out and about interviewing people all over the country from all walks of and their survey will culminate in August with a major 6 part Radio 4 series Penguin are delighted to be publishing the book of the series Merchant Vessels of the United States... United States.
