Menzel, 2019-02 Excerpt from Germany From the Earliest Period Vol 2 of 4 The touching appeals of the emperor to his son being disregarded he put himself at the head of his troops and marched against him The cities remained faithful to their allegiance and closed their gates against the rebellious prince with the exception of Nuremberg which was betrayed to him by the Jews and almost entirely destroyed Both armies met not far from Ratisbon and the emperor discovering that he was betrayed by his own followers fled perhaps too hastily in the sorrow of his heart He had still numerous adherents in the Rhine country and his son finding force unavailing attempted by cunning to oblige him voluntarily to abdicate the throne and proposed a conference at Coblenz The emperor came but struck to the heart at the sight of his ungrateful child ung himself at his feet exclaiming My son my son if I am to be punished by God for my sins at least stain not thine honor for it is unseemly in a son to sit in judgment over his father's sins The prince with assumed remorse entreated his forgiveness and under pretense of accompanying him to the diet at Mayence found means to separate him from his attendants and to shut him up at Bingen where he was required by the archbishops of Mayence and of Cologne and the bishop of Worms to give up the crown jewels The aged emperor finding his entreaties vain placed the jewels About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Germany, from the Earliest Period, Vol. 1 of 4 (Classic Reprint) Wolfgang Menzel, 2015-07 Excerpt from Germany From the Earliest Period Vol 1 of 4 The Romans regarded the forests of Germany with superstitious dread There were said to be gigantic trees which when hollowed into boats held thirty men and through the arches formed by their projecting roots a horseman could ride at full speed The buffalo the bison and the elk once numerous in these wilds have now totally disappeared and the bears whose skins were the chief article of the dress of our forefathers the wolves boars and innumerable other large game daily become more scarce The country possessed neither towns roads nor bridges and it is easily conceivable that dissatisfied with their meagre forest fare the people continually migrated to and took possession of the fruitful lands of neighbouring nations Solitude created a desire or romantic longing in the breast of the ancient inhabitant of these wilds for what was distant and unknown whilst the habits of the chase rendered him enterprising and hardy The laws founded upon personal freedom the virtuous manners and cheerful temperament of the ancient German originated in those mighty wastes where forced to trust to his own resources man necessarily became independent and was secure from the corruption incidental to crowded communities These wild forests also attached an idea of the marvellous so novel to the Romans to the character of the German who trained to war by the habits of the chase associated piety with ferocity and would still listen to the secret voice of Nature in the mysterious whisperings of the forest now disposing him to deep musings now creating strange forebodings which were recognised as true prophetic inspiration in the women and maidens About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such

Theology as Science in Nineteenth-Century Germany Johannes Zachhuber,2013-10-03 This study describes the origin development and crisis of the German nineteenth century project of theology as science Its narrative is focused on the two predominant theological schools during this period the Tübingen School and the Ritschl School Their work emerges as a grand attempt to synthesize historical and systematic theology within the twin paradigms of historicism and German Idealism Engaging in detail with the theological historical and philosophical scholarship of the story's protagonists Johannes Zachhuber reconstructs the basis of this scholarship as a deep belief in the eventual unity of human knowledge This idealism clashed with the historicist principles underlying much of the scholars actual research The tension between these paradigms ran through the entire period and ultimately led to the disintegration of the project at the end of the century Drawing on a wealth of primary sources many of which have never been used in English speaking scholarship before Zachhuber embeds the essentially theological story he presents within broader intellectual developments in nineteenth century Germany In spite of its eventual failure the project of theology as science in nineteenth century Germany is here described as a paradigmatic intellectual endeavour of European modernity with far reaching significance beyond the confines of a single academic discipline Modern Tariff Policies with Special Reference to China Ting Mien Liu,1924
