

MAKING INFERENCES

Name: _____

JUST BE YOURSELF

Jenny was about to start her first day at a new school. She jumped out of bed early and proudly put on her new school uniform. She couldn't wait to board the school bus and start making friends. When she got on the bus she started showing everyone her cool magic tricks. But all the students moved away from her and sat at front of the bus. When she got to school she tried making lots of jokes in class to get the other students to like her. But the other kids just gave her strange looks or ignored her. So at lunch time she decided to just be herself. She asked the other kids about their weekend and their hobbies. Suddenly a large group had formed around her. Everyone was interested in getting to know the new girl! And that's how Jenny finally made friends at her new school.

1. How was Jenny feeling about her first day of school?

How did you make this inference?

2. Did the students like Jenny's magic tricks and her jokes?

How did you make this inference?

3. Why did the other students like Jenny at the end?

How did you make this inference?

Context in Communication: A Cognitive View Gabriella Airenti,Marco Cruciani,Alessio Plebe,2017-04-03 Context is what contributes to interpret a communicative act beyond the spoken words It provides information essential to clarify the intentions of a speaker and thus to identify the actual meaning of an utterance A large amount of research in Pragmatics has shown how wide ranging and multifaceted this concept can be Context spans from the preceding words in a conversation to the general knowledge that the interlocutors supposedly share from the perceived environment to features and traits that the participants in a dialogue attribute to each other This last category is also very broad since it includes mental and emotional states together with culturally constructed knowledge such as the reciprocal identification of social roles and positions The assumption of a cognitive point of view brings to the foreground a number of new questions regarding how information about the context is organized in the mind and how this kind of knowledge is used in specific communicative situations A related very important question concerns the role played in this process by theory of mind abilities ToM both in typical and atypical populations In this Research Topic we bring together articles that address different aspects of context analysis from theoretical and empirical perspectives integrating knowledge and methods derived from Philosophy of language Linguistics Cognitive Science Cognitive Neuroscience Developmental and Clinical Psychology The Publishers' Trade List Annual ,1985 From Neuropsychology to Mental Structure Tim Shallice,1988-10-28 As a cognitive neuropsychologist Tim Shallice considers the general question of what can be learned about the operation of the normal cognitive system from the study of the cognitive difficulties arising from neurological damage and disease He distinguishes two types of theories of normal function primarily modular and primary non modular and argues that the problems of making valid inferences about normal function from studies of brain damaged subjects are more severe for the latter He first analyzes five well researched areas in which some modularity can be assumed short term memory reading writing visual perception and the relation between input and output language processing His aim is to introduce the methods about normal function mirror ones derived directly from studies of normal subjects and indeed at times preceded them He then more theoretically examines these inferences from group studies and individual case studies to modular and non modular systems Finally he considers five areas where theories of normal function are relatively undeveloped and neuropsychology provides counterintuitive phenomena and guides to theory building the organization of semantic systems visual attention concentration and will episodic memory and consciousness
