field     An Invitation to Die Jindra Brumlik, 2019-09-03 Jovanka's comfortable life comes to an abrupt end as her husband of twenty five years casually suggests a marital breakup. The ensuing crisis is intensified by the fact that she is an older woman in her late fifties hence doubly affected by a divorce. To her this is her husband's invitation to die. Thus begins the painful account of Jovanka's life and her struggle to survive as she attempts to put her life together. She seeks consolation in friends but finds only indifference, visits a prayer group meeting and finds the experience less than uplifting, attends a series of group encounters and experiences a short lived camaraderie. She checks herself into a mental institution to escape the pressures of the real world but finds that there is no cure for what ails her. She leaves town temporarily and even attempts to learn new marketable skills. She contacts old friends but finds only disappointment and rejection. Finally she decides to break away not via an institution or a temporary flight but by leaving the familiar surroundings that had become a hostile ground. Only by burning her bridges behind her can she hope to rebuild her shattered life. The author's incisive portrayal of the characters makes them real as life while the role of women in our society is being scrutinized from the self effacing housewife to the egocentric lesbian. The book reaches an unexpected climax as Jovanka defines her life in straightforward terms. With extraordinary skill Ms Brumlik has created characters as vivid and real as life itself. The dialogue is sharp and every reader will be fascinated with the spellbinding drama of a life in turmoil.     At the Fence of Metternich's Garden Mykola Riabchuk, 2021-03-16 This collection of essays reflects the personal experience of a Ukrainian intellectual engaged since his Soviet time youth in a painstaking but fascinating process of the both cultural and political Europeanization of his country. The title refers ironically to the notorious Chancellor Metternich's quip that Asia presumably begins at the eastern fence of his garden or as another apocryphal version maintains at the eastern end of the Viennese Landstrasse. This is a story of both exclusion and inclusion of walls and fences but also of a longing for freedom and a quest for solidarity. It is a book on different ways of being a European at both the collective and individual level despite various challenges or perhaps thanks to them.     Networked Art Craig J. Saper, 2001 The experimental art and poetry of the last half of the twentieth century offers a glimpse of the emerging networked culture that electronic devices will make omnipresent. Craig J Saper demarcates this new genre of networked art which uses the trappings of bureaucratic systems: money, logos, corporate names, stamps to create intimate situations among the participants. Saper explains how this genre developed from post World War II conceptual art including periodicals as artworks in themselves, letterist concrete and process poetry, Bauhaus versus COBRA, Fluxus publications, kits and machines, mail art and on sendings. The encyclopedic scope of the book includes discussions of artists from J Beuys to J S G Boggs and Bauhaus's Max Bill to Anna Freud.
