story resonates far beyond Costner's handsome appeal. As just about everyone knows by now, Costner stars as Iowa farmer Ray Kinsella, who hears the mysterious words "If you build it, he will come" and is compelled to build a baseball diamond in the middle of his cornfield. His wife Amy Madigan supports the wild idea, but a reclusive novelist modeled after J. D. Salinger and played by James Earl Jones is not so easily persuaded. The idealistic farmer is either a visionary or a deluded fool, but his persistence is rewarded when spirits from baseball's past begin appearing on the ball field. Past and present intermingle in the person of Moonlight Graham, superbly played by Burt Lancaster, an unknown player who sacrificed his dreams of baseball glory for a dignified life as a small town physician, but what all of this means is unclear until the film's memorably heartfelt conclusion. A meditation on family, memory, and faith, the film balances humor and magic to strike just the right chord of thoughtful emotion, affecting audiences so deeply that the baseball field created for the production has now become a mecca of sorts for dreamers around the world. Field of Dreams Lulit Kebede, 2016
